Johnson Calls U. S. Defense Job Adequate For Present

Denies Eisenhower Warning Statement After Conference With President

Key West, Fla., March 27 (AP).—Secretary of Defense Johnson today declared that the Nation's defenses are adequate despite Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's warning they are below the safety point.

Johnson made the statement after a 2½-hour conference with President Truman in his vacation White House here.

In a press conference after his talk with the President, Johnson announced that Stephen T. Early has been given an indefinite extension of his leave from the Pullman Company to permit him to continue as Deputy Secretary of Defense. He had been slated to step out on May 2.

Johnson, queried about Eisenhower's New York speech last week questioning the adequacy of the country's military program, declared:

"I think that the Nation's defenses, as worked out in the budget, are sufficient unto the needs of the moment."

Eisenhower, as acting chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, worked on the military budget for the year beginning July 1, Johnson pointed out.

Called for Testimony

He said he had not talked to Eisenhower since the speech. A Senate Appropriations subcommittee has called upon the wartime commander for testimony concerning his fears. Johnson said to confer with the general now "would not be fair."

"When he appears before Congress, I don't want it to appear that I talked with him and tried to interfere with him in any way," Johnson added.

The Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee will question Eisenhower behind closed doors at 2 p. m. Wednesday.

Subcommittee Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) said in Washington that members will ask Eisenhower to "clarify" his somewhat cryptic speech. It may be, Thomas said, that Eisenhower was misunderstood.

Johnson flew here from Washington—at the President's request—for a conference that Presidential Secretary Ross said covered North Atlantic defense as well as impending vacancies in vital defense posts at Washington.

Telephone Conference

Another conference—with Vice President Barkley, House Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack—was over a 25-minute four-way telephone hookup in which Mr. Truman reiterated his support of a full $3,375,000,000 foreign assistance program.

The President took time out to write a warm and affectionate letter to the ailing Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), thanking him for what the Chief Executive described as his consistent support of bipartisan foreign policy.

4 Men Scalded To Death in N. Y. Steam Explosion

New York, March 27 (AP).—A huge boiler exploded with a screeching roar in the world's largest steam plant today, scalding four repairmen to death.

Three horror-stricken fellow workmen became ill and were treated by doctors at the scene.

Those killed were Andrew Barney, 34; Howard Trucano, 37; Edwin Haffner, 38, and Ernest Steskal.

The steam plant is a subsidiary of Consolidated Edison. It generates 750,000 pounds of steam an hour for heating purposes.

Plane Falls Into Carolina Lake

Two Crashed Fliers Rescued By Congressman's Daughter

Agnes Barden, on boat she used in rescue of Navy fliers

The 16-year-old daughter of a Congressman, skippering her own boat, rescued two Navy fliers who crash-landed in a lake near Cherry Point, N. C., it was disclosed here yesterday.

She is Agnes Barden, who lives at New Bern, N. C., daughter of Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.).

Lieut. Juan R. Mayer, 1905 N st. nw., member of a reserve unit at Anacostia Naval Air Base and Midshipman D. C. Billiam of Bound Brook, N. J., were on a return flight Sunday from Jacksonville, Fla., to Anacostia when engine trouble forced them to crash land on Ellis Lake.

The plane skimmed across the water and crashed into woods bordering the lake, according to the Associated Press. Miss Barden, one of several who put out in small boats from a club nearby, reached the fliers first. Lieutenant Mayer was uninjured. Midshipman Billiam was treated for shock.

Boy, 5, Killed By Truck on 17th Street SE

D. C. Traffic Deaths to Date..19
Deaths This Date Last Year..18
Total Deaths Last Year.....71

A 5-year-old boy was killed by a truck yesterday on 17th st. se., near an intersection where parents of the area have repeatedly requested a traffic light.

John Stibli

The boy, John Stibli of 310 15th st. se., was pronounced dead on arrival at Gallinger Hospital.

The accident occurred directly in front of the Southeast Washington Boys Club at about 4:20 p. m.

Parents of the neighborhood and officials of the Boys Club have for several years been requesting the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic, without success, to install a traffic light at 17th st. and Massachusetts ave. se.

Last August, 10-year-old Billy Schmidt, of 1613 Holbrook st. ne., was critically injured at almost the same spot.

At that time, George Keneipp, Traffic Director, said lights are installed only when a study of intersection and the vehicle and pedestrian traffic and accidents involved shows need of lights.

Wallace L. Braun, Traffic Department engineer, said a study of traffic at 17th st. and Massachusetts ave. se. did not show need of a light there.

Currently a petition is being circulated in the neighborhood. It will be submitted directly to the Commissioners asking them personally to order a light at the intersection.

An official of the Boys Club pointed out that 17th st. se. is a main artery and has become a "racetrack." He said there are no lights on 17th st. se. between E. Capitol st. and the Sousa Bridge to slow traffic.

The official said the club entrance, in the middle of a short block on 17th st. se., between Massachusetts ave. and C st., is in a bad location.

The boys dart from the club and

Cabbie Shot By 2 Bandits After Stickup

By Paul Herron
Post Reporter

Two gunmen shot a cab driver in the back and dumped him into the street last night after using his cab to escape from the scene of a $7 holdup.

The hacker, Leslie Smith, 31, of 128 F st. nw., was reported in critical condition at Casualty Hospital.

Still conscious at the hospital after his ordeal, Smith told detectives two Negroes hailed him shortly after 9 p. m. at 4th and D sts. sw.

Both were armed, Smith said. They forced him to drive to an alley in the 700 block of L st. sw., where they tied him up with a 15-foot length of clothes line and shoved him, face down, into the back of the cab.

Then they drove to the scene of the holdup, Horton's Grill, 90 P st. nw. This was at about 9:30 p. m.

One of the men remained in the cab and kept a gun on the driver while his companion entered the place and pulled off the holdup.

Inside the grill, police said, the gunman walked over to Mrs. Iola Horton, 32, of 1126 Webster st. nw. Mrs. Horton, who operates the grill with her husband, opened the cash register at the thug's bidding.

He reached in and scooped up

Romania Accused By Yugoslavia of Border Barrage

Belgrade, March 27 (NYHT).—Romanian troops fired machine-guns and rifles into Yugoslavia for almost three hours yesterday, Premier Marshal Tito's Ministry of the Interior charged today.

The firing, which could be heard nine miles away, was intended to cause "trouble and confusion" at the start of yesterday's Yugoslav national elections, the communique said.

Between 92.6 and 99.8 percent of the vote was reported to have been cast for the government in the localities tallied today.

Campbell Admits He Agreed To Wife's Plan for Abortion

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Carlton Leo Campbell, 21, testified yesterday he was "too young to realize" the seriousness of the abortion which killed his 20-year-old wife January 4.

Tapping his fingers nervously, and grimacing at defense attorney James J. Laughlin during three hours on the District Court witness stand, Campbell testified he OK'd the abortion of his third child.

"It would interfere with our going out and having a good time, being as my wife was young and I am young," he said.

Ralph W. Myers, a 44-year-old window shade salesman, is on trial in Judge F Dickinson Letto' courtroom before a jury of 10 men and 2 women, charged with performing the abortion which killed Nina Jean Campbell. Her savagely beaten body was found January 5 in an apartment at 1321 Fairmont st. nw.

Under direct examination by Prosecutor John C. Conliff, Campbell nervously told of three visits he made to the Fairmont st. apartment, on the last of which: "There laid my wife, face down in a puddle of blood" in "such a mess no

High Court Holds Federal Workers Can Be Impartial On Red Trial Jury

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court held yesterday that Federal workers can be impartial jurors in cases involving Communist defendants.

The majority turned down the argument that a jury with seven Government employes subject to an anti-Communist loyalty program could not be impartial in the case of the secretary of the Communist Party.

In a 5-to-2 division, the court upheld the conviction of Eugene Dennis, the party official, who was convicted here in 1947 of contempt of Congress for refusing to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee. His fine of $1000 and jail sentence of a year is separate from the $10,000 and five-year penalties he received after a later conviction in New York, along with 10 other Communists, on charges of conspiracy to overthrow the Government.

The majority opinion by Justice Minton was joined in by Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Reed and Burton while Justice Jackson wrote a concurring opinion. Justices Black and Frankfurter wrote strong dissents. Justices Douglas and Clark took no part in the case.

No Intimidation Seen

The Minton opinion, in sweeping aside the contention that Government employes are affected by the loyalty program and its ramifications, declared:

"In this case, no more than the trial court can we without injustice take judicial notice of a miasma of fear to which Government employes are claimed to be peculiarly vulnerable—and from which other citizens are by implication immune.

"Vague conjecture does not convince that Government employes are so intimidated that they cringe before their Government in fear of investigation and loss of employment if they do their duty as jurors, which duty this same Government has imposed on them. There is no disclosure in this record that these jurors did not bring to bear, as is particularly the custom when personal liberty hinges on the determination, the sense of responsibility and the individual integrity by which men judge men."

Black's Dissent Outlined

But Justice Black said no juror could meet the Constitutional test of "impartiality" if he has "good reason to fear that a vote for acquittal would subject him to harassing investigations and perhaps cost him his job."

Black said that "to say that employes of the United States could meet objective tests of complete impartiality in the trial of cases like this is to disregard human nature."

Frankfurter declared "there is a pervasiveness of atmosphere in Washington whereby forces are released in relation to jurors who may be deemed supporters of an accused under a cloud of disloyalty that are emotionally and qualitatively different from those which come into play in relation to jurors dealing with offenses which in their implications do not touch the security of the Nation.

Budget Hearing Action

Arlington Board to Advertise 30-Cent Rise in Tax Rate

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The Arlington County Board last night voted to advertise a 30-cent increase in the county tax rate for the 1951 fiscal year.

If approved, this would hike the present county rate from $3.45 per $100 valuation to $3.75. Of present tax money, $1.80 goes for general county purposes, and $1.65 for schools.

The increase was suggested by Robert W. Cox at the close of a public hearing on a county budget of nearly nine million dollars for fiscal 1951.

Members had heard vigorous support for increased pay for police and firemen during the hearing, as well as persistent statements from some county residents that government heads have repeatedly underestimated revenues they would get from county tax yields.

Cox explained that he made his motion to permit the board members to discuss a higher rate to care for some county needs now outside the budget prospectus. Board members may not adopt a higher tax rate than that advertised, but may lower the advertised rate.

About 175 people crowded the county board room for the joint hearing held by the Arlington County Board and the Arlington School Board. Last night's discussion followed an earlier joint meeting of the two boards to discuss school phases of the county budget.

Many of those who testified said they are willing to pay higher taxes in order to meet pressing county needs. Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg had not recommended a tax increase in the county rate, although some citizen groups had proposed a 20-cent increase in the school tax rate.

Mrs. Paul T. Myatt, in advocating increased police resources for Arlington, declared, "We seem to be drawing from the metropolitan area a very large percentage of its undesirable inhabitants—floating population, I hope." She added she had what she hoped was a unique experience of watching a robbery performed, and declared, "What good is it to take one serv-

'No Case' Against Lattimore, FBI Chief Hints to Probers

Hoover and McGrath Refuse to Release Files to Committee

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover implied strongly yesterday that the FBI has no case of espionage to make against Owen J. Lattimore, the man whom Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) has called the "top Soviet spy" in this country.

Hoover told a Senate investigating committee that when the FBI completes a case against anyone, it is sent forthwith to appropriate United States attorneys for prosecution, if there is evidence that a crime has been committed.

The only exceptions would be rare instances when prosecution is withheld in hopes of thereby detecting or incriminating the criminal's accomplices.

The inference was, accordingly, that if the FBI had evidence of espionage activities by Lattimore, it would have acted against him long since.

Questioned by Tydings

Hoover's explanation, in answer to questions from Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of a special Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, came at the end of a session in which he and United States Attorney General J. Howard McGrath voiced vigorous and adamant objection to releasing FBI files to the subcommittee.

It was evident their refusal was made with the full knowledge and support of President Truman, the only man who could overrule the existing order not to make such files available.

Whether Mr. Truman will make a formal refusal to Tydings' subcommittee, which has been seeking those and other loyalty files ever since the investigation began, is not known.

It was learned last night, however, that whether he replies or not, he has finally decided, and firmly, that no such files will be given to the committee directly or in any round-about way or by half-way measures.

Developments Come Fast

Developments in the matter of McCarthy's charges against Lattimore, and his general charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department, came thick and fast yesterday. The most important:

1. In a cable to the Associated Press from Kabul, Afghanistan, where he is now finishing work on a United Nations mission, Lattimore said McCarthy's charges against him were "pure moonshine."

2. Lawyers employed in his behalf by Mrs. Lattimore wrote McCarthy a blistering letter, strongly indicating they would sue him for slander or libel. They suggested McCarthy "put a stop to this fantastic outrage" of making "base and unfounded" charges.

3. In an even more seething tone, wartime Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson wrote a letter to the New York Times accusing McCarthy of ulterior motives in his charges and of being one who "seeks political advantage from damage to his country."

4. McCarthy himself indicated that he will take the Senate floor today to continue his case against Lattimore. He asked that an FBI agent be in attendance so he can turn over to him "documents in

Jurisdiction Questioned

Senate Unit Sharply Divided On Federal Pervert Problem

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Members of the Senate District Appropriations subcommittee yesterday divided sharply along party lines in a dispute over what further action the group should take to meet the security threat posed by perverts on Government payrolls.

The dispute developed in an hour and a half closed-door meeting in the Capitol. It had subcommittee Chairman Lister Hill (D., Ala.), supported by other Democrats, protesting the perversion problem does not properly come within the jurisdiction of the District funds group.

Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Neb.), Republican floor leader in the Senate, took the lead in insisting the Hill subcommittee, of which he is a member, should deal with the problem of Government employe perverts. It was Wherry's demand that started the subcommittee inquiry.

Details of the dispute were obscured by a pledge of secrecy exacted of the subcommittee members by Chairman Hill.

Hill would say only that there will be further meetings of the subcommittee. He would not say whether they would deal with the perversion problem; other members said they would.

While no final decision was reached on what the Hill subcommittee should do, two steps were proposed and discussed for giving officials stronger weapons for getting perverts out of Government jobs.

More Funds for Police

One would be an increase in funds for the District Police Department to let it assign more men to investigating and arresting perverts. Money for this could be recommended by the Hill subcommittee when it passes on the District budget for next year.

The second step would be a law that would close the existing legal loophole under which sex perverts arrested for morals offenses in the District can post $25 or more collateral on a charge of disorderly conduct and escape even an appearance in court. The stricter law

Reds Lose 4000 In Hainan Blow, Nationalists Say

Taipei, Formosa (Tuesday) March 28 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists today reported the biggest Communist invasion attempt on Hainan Island but asserted Red beachheads had been wiped out.

The landings were made yesterday at three points on the northern coast of the big island. But the Nationalists declared the invading force was cleared out with at least 4000 Reds killed, wounded and taken prisoner.

Dispatches represented the outcome of this invasion attempt as a major Nationalist victory. It was the biggest landing the Reds have made on Hainan.

If it was on the scale portrayed, it might have been the start of a full-scale attempt to conquer the island.

Bridges Wants Manhunt for 'Master Spy'

He Is in State Dept.; GOP Senator Says in New War on Acheson

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) last night charged a "master spy" is operating in the State Department and accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson of "shallow and specious maneuvering" to divert attention from foreign policy "inadequacies."

Touching off a new Senate GOP offensive against Acheson and State Department policies and personnel, Bridges demanded Acheson be "thoroughly questioned" by the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating charges by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.).

Firing a long list of questions at the special subcommittee, he made no attempt to identify the "master spy," but said the investigating group should find out who he is.

Speaks Despite Warning

"We must find the master spy," he told the Senate, "the servant of Russia who moves the puppets, Hiss and Wadleigh and the others . . . using them and using our State Department as he wills."

Bridges took the floor despite warnings from some Democrats and Republicans that attacks on Acheson and his department are impeding our conduct of foreign relations and impairing our position abroad.

Immediately after his speech, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) spoke up in Acheson's defense and charged McCarthy "and others" have already dealt a serious blow to the framework of world peace.

Playing Stronger Role

"The State Department is playing a stronger role against communism now that it has ever played," Kefauver told the Senate. "Secretary Acheson's speeches in California should make that clear . . .

"It is one thing to differ with the Secretary of State and the State Department on certain matters of policy . . . It is a totally different thing to indulge in irresponsible attacks on one of the most vital arms of the United States Government in the way that has been done in recent weeks."

Senator William Benton (D.,

Mrs. Brunauer Hits Charges; Reveals Threats to Family

Mrs. Esther Caukin Brunauer, who Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) once tried to imply was a Communist and Soviet spy contact, yesterday made a point-by-point refutation of his charges.

Before the special Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, the State Department official made a categoric denial of being now or ever a Communist. Communist sympathizer or supporter of "any doctrine which conflicts with the basic principles of our American democracy."

On February 20, in a speech in the Senate, McCarthy made her "Case No. 47," without mentioning her name.

The inference from the reports he read was that she and her husband were Communists, were recently in touch with a Soviet espionage ring, and that she was associated with Communist activities here.

By the time McCarthy made his case, mentioning her by name to the subcommittee, it boiled down to the charge that she was a "bad security risk," and to the implication that her husband was a Communist.

Mrs. Brunauer's husband, Stephen Brunauer, was with her yesterday in the hearing room. He is a scientist who has made distin-

Butterworth's Job Confined to Japan; Changes Follow Long Criticism on 'Hill'

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson yesterday shook up the State Department's high command in the Far Eastern field, which has been the target of unrelenting Congressional criticism for more than a year.

He moved Dean Rusk from the post of deputy undersecretary and made him assistant secretary in charge of Far Eastern Affairs.

At the same time he reassigned Assistant Secretary W. Walton Butterworth, who has been handling Far Eastern Affairs, to new duties entirely concerned with Japan, and especially with speeding up the Japanese peace treaty.

The changes came swiftly after President Truman, at Key West, had announced that Ambassador Philip C. Jessup had decided to stay with the State Department instead of returning to his teaching of international law at Columbia University.

Will Be Close to Acheson

Jessup will keep his present title and rank as Ambassador-at-Large, but will be at Acheson's service as a close top-level adviser or as a roving emissary to foreign countries.

The President made clear his own trust in Jessup, who last week angrily denied to a Senate subcommittee the charge that he had an "unusual affinity" for Communist causes.

"The extremely valuable trip he has just completed to Asia and the Far East," the President said, "has underscored his unusual usefulness to the United States Government, and I am delighted that General Eisenhower, as President of Columbia University, has agreed that Ambassador Jessup's leave of absence should be extended indefinitely so that he can continue the important work he is doing for the United States Government."

Secretary Overburdened

By staying with the State Department for an "indefinite" time, Jessup will give much-needed strength and counsel to the overburdened Secretary.

Until recently the Secretary's strongest prop in policy-making was Counselor George Kennan, who is now returning from a long trip to Latin America but is planning a leave of absence for rest and study.

With Kennan gone, the Secretary's closest advisers have been Paul Nitze, the chief of the policy planning staff, and Adrian S. Fisher, the department's legal adviser, whom the Secretary has known and trusted for years.

A State Department announcement last night said that Jessup and Undersecretary James E. Webb would share the "coordinating responsibilities" formerly carried by Rusk as Deputy Undersecretary. Rusk had been a kind of chairman of the assistant secretaries in charge of the geographic

Maid of Cotton Meets Princess, Doesn't Know Her

London, March 27 (U.P.).—Elizabeth McGee, the 19-year-old "Maid of Cotton," confessed today with a blush that she had made an "awful" social blunder—she asked Princess Margaret who she was.

It happened at a cocktail party given in Miss McGee's honor six days ago at the home of United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas. The pretty brunette from Spartanburg, S. C., related:

"I was introduced to a group of Americans and Britons, including a pretty young lady.

"I said, 'How do you do' to the people whose names I caught. Then I turned to the young lady and said:

'I'm afraid I didn't catch yours?'

"The young lady was Princess Margaret. It was a real shock when Miss Douglas (the Ambassador's daughter Sharman) told me. I apologized, but I forgot to curtsey and I got all flustered."

Clause in Science Bill On FBI Quiz Rejected

The Senate refused yesterday to accept House changes in a science foundation bill, sending it to a Senate-House conference committee.

The House wrote in an amendment requiring the FBI to pass on the loyalty of persons employed by the proposed foundation or given scholarships by it.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has opposed any such authority, contending it is the duty of his organization to gather information, but not to evaluate it.

Forced Loyalty Oath Fought by Professors

Cleveland, O., March 27 (U.P.).—The American Association of University Professors voted unanimously last night to oppose firing of any college teacher solely on the grounds of membership in "an unlawful political party or organization."

The 250 professor-delegates of the organization concluded their two-day convention here with another resolution opposing compulsory loyalty oaths for teachers and students.

A third resolution opposed FBI checks of persons tapped for scholarships to a proposed national science foundation.

Feinberg Law Upheld In New York Appeal

New York, March 27 (AP).—New York State's Feinberg law, barring Communists from jobs in the State's school system, was ruled constitutional today for the second time.

The appellate division of the State Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, ruled unanimously:

"The constitutional right of free speech may be abridged as a condition to the enjoyment of public employment."

The New York State Communist Party is appealing to the State Court of Appeals.

"counteracting the efforts of the Russian-dominated Polish delegation."

But most impressive was Mrs. Brunauer's answers to McCarthy's specific charges. Their principal accusations and the accompanying denials are as follows:

1. The charge: She was "the first assistant to Alger Hiss in the San Francisco Conference."

The answer: She was not, and had no personal or official contact with him there. She was the assistant of the late Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.).

AAUW Charge Denied

2. The charge: She was instrumental, as executive secretary of the American Association of University Women, in committing that organization to various Communist front enterprises, particularly in the consumer field.

The answer: She wasn't the executive secretary, had nothing to do with any consumer activities. The one to which McCarthy referred found the AAUW in company with two organizations later called subversive, 15 more that were not, like the YWCA, and suggesting to the OPA that canned fruits and vegetables should be labelled by grade.

3. The charge: She presided in 1936 at a meeting of the Friends of the Soviet Union at which a Communist spoke.

The answer: It was part of her AAUW job to preside at meetings on international affairs. She had no way of knowing that the organization was to be classed as subversive some 12 years later. Further, "it was not considered reprehensible or a sign of disloyalty for American citizens to attend lectures on conditions in Soviet Russia, even if made by Soviet sympathizers."

Call for Youth Congress

4. The charge: Mrs. Brunauer signed a call to a 1939 meeting of the American Youth Congress.

The answer: She did. So did four Senators, six Representatives, three Governors, and two Cabinet members, including James A. Farley. The purpose was to try to "capture" the organization by the liberals. It failed. The Communists later got it.

5. The charge: She was active in launching the American Union for Concerted Peace Efforts.

The answer: She did and she's proud of it. The organization was never cited as subversive and, in fact, had a strong interventionist line absolutely opposite that of the Communists during the Hitler-Stalin Pact.

7. The charge: The leader of the organization was the editor of the Communist Daily Worker.

The answer: He wasn't. He belonged to a Communist organization with a vaguely similar name.

Family Is Threatened

Mrs. Brunauer said the charges have already been felt in her home, where there are two small children and an elderly grandmother.

"Since March 13 we have received anonymous telephone calls, accompanied by threats and profanity, with such advice as 'Get out of this neighborhood, you Communists, or you will be carried out in a box.'

"All of you who have families will realize the effect this has on the atmosphere of a home—you know how you would feel if it were happening in your home.

Senator McCarthy may have his own reasons for what he has done and the way he has done it, but I will never be able to understand them."

areas and of those in the fields of United Nations and economic affairs.

But Jessup's most important function, it was generally assumed last night, would be that of a personal adviser and trouble-shooter for Acheson.

Butterworth, a career officer with a brilliant record, has never been entirely happy as Assistant Secretary in a field highly charged with politics.

When he was nominated last May he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he had not sought the job and had pleaded with Acheson not to appoint him. Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) led a fight against his confirmation, on the ground that he was "a symbol of a policy which has failed."

Butterworth was Gen. George C. Marshall's counselor of embassy and chief diplomatic adviser during the general's mission to China in 1945-47.

His assignment to full-time duties on Japanese affairs reflects an increased anxiety within the Administration here to get a peace treaty with Japan, whether or not Russia and Communist China are parties to it.

The State Department announcement said Butterworth would work directly with the Secretary and would also be the liaison officer with the National Military Establishment and other agencies concerned with a Japanese treaty.

"His duties will require that he make a trip to Japan in the near future for further consultations with General MacArthur," the department announced. Butterworth went to the meeting of American ambassadors in Bangkok, Siam, last month, and on his way there had long and satisfactory talks with MacArthur.

Rusk, who now takes charge of Far Eastern affairs, was associate professor of government at Mills College, California, before going into the Army in 1940. He joined the State Department in 1946, and specialized in United Nations affairs until his appointment as Assistant Secretary a year ago.

As Deputy Undersecretary he kept the rank and pay of an Assistant Secretary, and his new post therefore involves no change in status.

ice in the county and push it way up unless we put all our services on an even level."

John Paul Jones, speaking on belief of the increased fire department program, told those at the hearing they could cut their fire insurance costs if the county were better protected against the fire danger.

Matt Huppuck, of the executive division of the Arlington Community Chest and Council, told board members they need to have a plan for a park and recreation system. He said that with such a plan, it would be cheaper to buy land now, "even if by bond issue," rather than wait years for such purchases and then have to seek redeveloped sites for park areas.

The board must act on the budget by April 29.

Eviction to Start On Jr. High Site

Eviction proceedings will be initiated this week against 10 families still occupying houses on a site condemned to make way for construction of the new Terrell Junior High School, District Property Officer Paul Chalupsky said yesterday.

More than 50 families already have moved out of the area at 1st and L sts. nw. Chalupsky said that 54 persons are living in nine buildings still occupied.

A place will be found for Ward Hough, a disabled war veteran, who with his wife and 13 children occupies a house at 129 L st. nw. Hough has reported that he has been unable to find other quarters, Chalupsky said. Another family will be unable to move until five children recover from measles, he said.

Conviction of Dennis Upheld find themselves through such alleged association, it is asking more of human nature in ordinary Government employes than history warrants to ask them to exercise that 'uncommon portion of fortitude' which the founders of this nation thought judges could exercise only if given a life tenure."

The division in the court appeared to be a clear indication that the new "Truman Court" is much less likely to decide civil rights cases in the defendant's behalf than the "Roosevelt Court" in which the Black-Douglas-Murphy-Rutledge bloc usually managed to find a fifth, and majority, vote. Murphy and Rutledge were succeeded by Clark and Minton.

Minton pointed out that Congress in 1935 declared Government workers eligible for jury service here and that the Supreme Court twice thereafter upheld such service—one in a theft case involving a private business and again in a narcotics case involving the Treasury Department.

Then he said the court now reaffirms those rulings. He said "one of an unpopular minority group must be accorded that solicitude which properly accompanies an accused person" but "he is not entitled to unusual protection or exception."

Minton noted that the loyalty program is not directed "solely" against Communists and that Dennis was not on trial for "a crime peculiar to Communists." He also pointed out that the Dennis trial occurred before the loyalty program was fully under way.

Jackson reiterated his past opposition to Government employes serving on any District juries but he said "the way for the court to get out of the hole" into which it previously had fallen "is not to dig another and worse one."

The justice said that whenever a majority can be mustered on the court to overturn past "weird and misguided" rulings, he would "be one of it." But meanwhile, he contended, the Black-Frankfurter position amounted to "a partial repeal—for Communists only." To that he said he could not agree.

Jackson said the result of such a position would be that if a Republican were brought to trial for defying "the committee investigating the State Department" the trial judge would have to deny a motion to exclude Government employes. But he would have to grant it in the case of a Communist, Jackson argued.

"It is true," Jackson added, "that Communists are the current phobia in Washington. But always, since I can remember, some group or other is being investigated and castigated here. At various times it has been Bundists and Germans, Japanese, lobbyists, tax evaders, oil men, utility men, bankers, brokers, labor leaders, Silver Shirts and Fascists."

Jackson said that none of them should be forced to defend himself against Government accusations before a jury including Government employes.

"But so long as accused persons who are Republicans, Dixiecrats, Socialists or Democrats must put up with such a jury," Jackson concluded, "it will have to do for Communists."

Frankfurter, in an obvious answer to Jackson, said that "to recognize the existence of what is characterized as a phobia against a particular group is not to discriminate in its favor." He said this would not "coddle Communists." It would, he said, vindicate and strengthen America's "claim in behalf of our civilization" if "those who in the popular mind appear to threaten the very existence of the Government are tried by citizens other than those in the immediate employ of the Government at the seat of Government."

FACTS ABOUT . . . AMERICAN SECURITY'S . . . COMMON TRUST FUND

When established:	February 28, 1950.
Name:	American Security Trust Fund "A".
Authority:	District of Columbia Law and Rules and Regulations of Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.
Purpose:	To bring together assets of participating accounts into one common trust fund for investment, and thereby obtain for these accounts greater stability of income and safety of principal, through a much broader diversification of investments than is generally possible for accounts of moderate size when invested independently.
Participants:	Only bona fide trusts, now being administered or created in the future, of which American Security is trustee or co-trustee, may participate. Maximum participation for any one trust is $50,000. The Trust Company will receive no fee for operation of the fund, but will continue to receive its compensation from participating trusts as in the past.
Administration:	In accordance with provisions of a plan approved by our Board of Directors, and under the investment supervision of our Trust and Investment Committee. Income collected on securities held in the fund will be distributed quarterly among all participating trusts, and income payments will then be made to the beneficiaries of those trusts as desired by them.
Audits:	Once a year, by a firm of certified public accountants selected by and responsible to our Board of Directors. Information on such audits will be forwarded to beneficiaries of participating trusts. In addition, all accounts under the management of the Trust Department are examined regularly by banking authorities.
Miscellaneous:	Approximately 30 states throughout the country have authorized the creation of common trust funds, and many large banks have successfully operated funds for several years. We believe the creation of our common trust fund will enable us to render better trust service to the beneficiaries of our smaller and moderate sized trusts.

American Security acts as executor and trustee under wills, and as trustee under trust agreements.

For further information on our common trust fund or any other trust services, we suggest that you write, visit or telephone our Trust Department.

2 Russians Turn Ire On Mrs. Roosevelt

Lake Success, March 27 (AP).—Soviet delegates verbally attacked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt twice today and walked out of two more United Nations commissions after failing to oust Nationalist China's representatives.

This boosted to 17 the total of U. N. organs hit by Soviet boycotts since they began January 10.

The No. 2 man on the Soviet delegation, Semyon K. Tsarapkin, rushed out of the Commission on Human Rights after a sharp tangle with Mrs. Roosevelt. She was then reelected for her fifth annual term as chairman of the commission. The commission voted 12 to 2 (Soviet Union and Yugoslavia) that Tsarapkin's proposal to oust the Nationalist Chinese was out of order.

Tsarapkin accused Mrs. Roosevelt of carrying on what he said was a United States campaign to used the U. N. for its own political purposes.

Mrs. Roosevelt called the Soviet walkout "propaganda tactics" and "irresponsible action." Tsarapkin left before she spoke.

A low-ranking Soviet delegate, Nikolai Klimov, delivered in the U. N. Transportation and Communication Commission later in the day a long attack on United States policies toward China.

He accused Mrs. Roosevelt of having made a "demogogic" statement in the human rights body. His long attack on the United States, coupled with Tsarakin's speech this morning, disclosed a new angle in the Soviet campaign here. Previously the Russians have drummed out speeches against Nationalist China with only side blasts at the United States.

The Transportation and Communication Commission voted 11 to 4 that a proposal by Klimov to expel the Nationalist Chinese was out of order.

Mrs. Roosevelt angrily interrupted Tsarapkin when he was in the midst of a charge that the Nationalists were using American bombers to attack Chinese civilians.

She said: "We are now proceeding to the election of officers. We are not listening to any more propaganda speeches."

Pact Parley Not to Rule On Germany

The Hague, March 27 (U.P.).—The chiefs of staff of the 12 Atlantic Pact powers holding a strategy conference here will deliberately ignore Germany's defense position, authoritative military quarters disclosed today.

The disclosure came as Dutch Communists, who claim a party membership of 100,000, were recruiting volunteers for a mass protest demonstration against the Atlantic Pact defense conference. They have timed their demonstration for April 1 to coincide with the meeting of the Council of Atlantic Pact Defense Ministers under the chairman of United States Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Military quarters said that despite mounting agitation in some Western countries for a limited rearmament of western Germany, the problem will not receive even passing mention by the top-ranking military strategists when they meet Tuesday under the chairmanship of Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"The German question is not on the agenda and cannot be placed there under the terms of the Atlantic Past itself," a spokesman said. "This is not to say that the nations are unaware of the problem or that it will not some day be resolved.

No one Allied supreme commander-in-chief will emerge from The Hague conference nor is such an appointment likely to be made unless "war begins or is very imminent," one spokesman said. In addition, he said, each nation will assume a position that a division or a corps would assume in relations to an Allied Supreme command.

13,000 Attend Flower Show At Armory

Like an insatiable bee, Washington continued to lap up the fragrance in the National Guard Armory yesterday.

Almost 13,000 persons communed with the blooms during the fifth day of the National Flower Show. Armory officials said it was a record attendance for Monday.

With professional judging over, interest centered on the garden club judging. The show, sponsored by the Society of American Florists, closes Wednesday.

Among the garden club exhibitors, Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, of the Chevy Chase, D. C., Garden Club, and Mrs. E. R. Creighton, of Chattanooga, Tenn., drew special honors with their displays in invitation niches.

Under the theme, "A Child's Treasure Trove," Mrs. Lansburgh's display used a piece of sewer pipe and a tin can for containers out of which bloomed jonquils, pieris japonica, marguerites, cherry blossom branches, pansies and forget-me-nots.

In a Chinese container, Mrs. Creighton showed Drasena leaves, a banana plant, galax leaves, and cyripedium orchids. She called the display, "Botanical Gardens Fantasy."

The judges were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rockwell, West Nyack, N. Y., and Mrs. Gustave Ballenberg, Philadelphia, Pa.

As Doctors Meet

Blood Needs Told in Case Of A-Attack

Baltimore, March 27 (AP).—A medical authority warned today that if Baltimore were atom bombed doctors would need more blood for transfusions in two weeks than the Red Cross collected last year all over the country.

Dr. Perrin H. Long, professor of preventive medicine at Johns Hopkins University Medical School, made the estimate. It was part of his keynote talk to a panel of doctors gathered here to study for a week and make plans for civilian defense against an atomic attack.

Doctors from seven Middle-Atlantic States, Washington, and Puerto Rico are attending the special school. It was set up by the Atomic Energy Commission and the National Security Resources Board. Similar courses are planned in other cities for doctors all over the country.

Dr. Long painted this medical picture of what would happen if an atom bomb went off at 3 p. m. about 800 feet over the center of Baltimore, or any large city of similar makeup:

Killed outright, 40,000; seriously hurt, 50,000—of which 10,000 would die within a week; 30,000 moderately injured; half the doctors killed or injured.

"There would be terrific morale problems," Dr. Long declared. "Everyone would be looking for grannie or auntie to see if she were still alive. We don't know whether people would pitch in and help or take off running for Cumberland Gap."

Dr. Long outlined these medical needs to face such a situation:

About 1800 women organized into first aid squads of 9 each. About 2700 men to bear litters. Fifty ambulance groups, 100 collecting points for casualties, and 50 clearing centers to determine injuries and get treatment started.

Submarine Detection Units Praised

Antisubmarine sonar direction devices now being developed will "give us the upper hand" if enemy submarines get through to their targets in a future war, Rear Admiral C. B. Momsen, Navy sub expert, said yesterday.

At present, detection is the "nub of the problem," because torpedoes such as the Germans developed, with a range up to 25,000 yards to the target, "outrange our detection rangers," he said.

The assistant chief of naval operations for undersea warfare addressed the Washington post of the Society of American Military Engineers at the Burlington Hotel. Capt. A. D. Hunter, deputy and assistant chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, and president of the post, presided.

Admiral Momsen's hint of new detection developments came after he said that present sonar instruments—which send sound waves through the water to bounce back from a submarine's hull—are effective to only 3000 yards even under good conditions.

Carsickness Fails As Idle Benefit Cause

Trenton, N. J., March 27 (AP).—People who can't take jobs because they get sick riding in buses and cars are not entitled to collect unemployment compensation in New Jersey, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The State court said the compensation law was aimed at "involuntary unemployment" and not as insurance against the consequences of sickness.

The ruling involved a Camden woman who lost a job as a home worker and turned down her employer's offer of factory work because she was "allergic to vehicular transportation."

House Fight Looms Over Port Security

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A House floor fight to restore a $4,100,000 budget item for the protection of American harbors—cut out by the House Appropriations Committee—is being planned, it was learned yesterday.

Many Congressmen from seaboard cities as well as others interested in national defense plan to back an amendment to do something about port security—an admitted chink in our present defense structure.

Several military experts recently have warned against the danger of a Communist tramp slipping atomic bombs into United States harbors, or of subversive forces destroying ships and piers by setting fires, or other sabotage activity.

The Government agency charged with port security is the Coast Guard—a Treasury Department force which becomes part of the Navy in wartime. But active Coast Guard personnel and boats assigned to such work are barely adequate for normal peacetime harbor control.

Reserve Never Got Funds

To answer emergency needs and give some protection against the tramp steamer-sabotage threat, the Nation's war plans rely on having a trained Coast Guard Reserve ready. But though Federal law provides for such a reserve, and some 4000 officers and 500 enlisted men are on the rolls, the force has never received any funds for training.

The President's budget calls for spending $4,100,000 for initiating a Coast Guard Reserve training program. Training of 1900 officers and 6000 men is planned, the bulk of whom would be assigned to port security duty. Ultimately an organzed reserve of 2469 officers and 26,645 men is desired.

Despite strong support of the proposal from the Department of Defense, however, the money was knocked out by the House Appropriations Committee. The movement to restore the funds will be backed by some members of the group, as well as members of the House Armed Services Committee.

"The proposed reactivation of the Coast Guard Reserves is a matter of strong concern to the Department of Defense," states Secretary Louis Johnson.

Wants Force in Being

"It is vital to national defense that a modest but highly trained force be in being to detect sabotage, supervise explosives loading, prevent waterfront fires and explosions, control the identity of waterfront personnel, etc."

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, in a recent letter to Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), emphasized that the Coast Guard Reserve training program did not duplicate training now being given to the Naval Reserve.

While the Navy and its reserve have a harbor defense function, as reported in The Washington Post yesterday, under a division of effort the Navy handles antisubmarine nets, electronic devices, etc., to prevent enemy craft from sneaking into harbors, and the Coast Guard the job of protection against subversive activity of ships and persons lawfully permitted to enter.

Plans for Parley On Southeast Asia Red Threat Pushed

London, March 27 (U.P.).—The British government is rushing preparations for a Commonwealth conference at Canberra, Australia, in May to cope with a new Communist drive in southeast Asia, official quarters said today.

Reports of the new Communist drive told of increasing agitation and disturbances throughout southeast Asia, with hints that Chinese Communists might pour into neighboring French Indo-China to help the rebel regime of Ho Chi-minh.

Commonwealth relations officials said an official announcement on the conference probably would be made by the Australian government sometime this week.

New Bogus Bills Flood N. Y. Area

New York, March 27 (NYHT.)—A new series of counterfeit $10 and $20 Federal Reserve notes is appearing in large quantities in New York and throughout the country, it was announced today at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Counterfeit notes of nine of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks have been found, and notes of the other three are expected to turn up soon.

Albert E. Whitaker, superving agent of the United States Secret Service, said $230,000 worth of the bogus notes have been seized and 35 persons arrested in the New York Federal Reserve district.

John Howard Cleared

Chicago, March 27, (U.P.).—John Howard, 25, estranged husband of actress Diana Barrymore, was cleared today of a disorderly conduct charge filed after he was arrested with a girl in a hotel room.

New Exchange Rate on Ruble 'Unjustified,' U. S. Protests

The United States has protested to Russia that the new four-to-one ruble exchange rate for American dollars is "completely unjustified."

A note delivered last week in Moscow demanded that the former exchange rate of eight rubles for one dollar granted to the American Embassy be restored.

Moscow served notice February 28 that, effective July 1, the embassy will have to pay $1 for four rubles. The effect of this, officials said, will be to increase the cost of operating the embassy by nearly one million dollars a year.

The note was delivered to the Soviet Foreign Office on Friday and published yesterday by the State Department.

Even with price reductions announced by Moscow at the time the ruble was devalued the note said Moscow prices are still "extremely high, relative to prices in Washington."

White bread, it was asserted, costs $1.40 per kilogram (2.2 pounds) compared with 26 cents in Washington. The Washington price of $1.52 per kilogram for butter was contrasted with a range of $8.58 to $11.03 in Moscow.

Moscow was told that its order arbitrarily setting a one-to-four exchange rate is "purely fictitious so long as the ruble is not an internationally traded currency."

John M. McSweeney, officer in charge of Soviet affairs in the State Department, said that until December 16, 1947, foreign diplomats were allowed to buy rubles in Moscow at the rate of 12 for $1 while the commercial exchange rate was 5.3 to the dollar. This subsequently was reduced to 8 to 1, and on March 1 was cut to 6 to 1.

French Ports Struck 24 Hours by Reds

Paris, March 27 (U.P.).—Communist-led dock workers walked out in every port in France today except Cherbourg in a 24-hour protest strike against military aid shipments.

Steel-helmeted republican guards enforced complete order as the government met labor's defiance and by nightfall there was not a single report of violence.

A strike was scheduled for 5 p. m. in Algeria. It was at the port of Bizerte, in neighboring Tunisia, that the first load of American arms aid was expected to arrive.

The movements of the French aircraft carrier Dixmude, carrying 48 Navy Hellcat fighters from Norfolk, Va., have been kept secret in order to upset Communist plans to protest against such shipments. The Dixmude last was reported about to dock at Bizerte.

The Communists called out the port workers technically as a protest against the arrest of three strikers by Marseille police after a Communist-sponsore l labor demonstration there last week.

But both the government and the union saw today's 24-hour shutdowns as a test of strength.

Dockers in Marseille voted today to extend the strike there until wage demands were satisfied.

In Cherbourg, the work loading and unloading ships went on as usual. The dockers there voted three times against striking.

In ports where some non-Communist workers showed up for work most of them were sent home because of lack of key men.

Nearly 35,000 members of the Communist-run stevedore union of the General Confederation of Labor were reported to have quit their jobs throughout France.

GOP Heads Seek Cut in Foreign Aid

Republican House leaders went right ahead yesterday with plans to slash the foreign aid bill in spite of weekend warnings from President Truman and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

"Our inclination is to make some cuts," said Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), after a meeting of the Republican House policy committee.

Taking a word from Senator Vandenberg's appeal against cutting the bill, Martin said the Republicans looked at foreign aid as an "unpartisan" matter on which "some unpartisan Democrats" would support them.

The Democratic leadership, on the other hand, was ready for strenuous efforts to beat back amendments cutting the amount of the authorization or tying the Administration's hands in spending the money.

Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) got ammunition for the coming floor battle at a private lunch with Secretary Acheson at the Capitol. They had invited the Secretary three weeks ago so they could have a fill-in on the foreign situation.

Whether or not the luncheon was timed to coincide with the foreign aid debate, the Secretary used the occasion to stress the urgent importance of the bill for American foreign policy. State Department plans for southeast Asia and other crucial areas depend, in large part, on getting the authority provided by the present $3,370,000,000 bill.

The Republicans did not decide yesterday how much they would try to slash the authorization. Their policy committee plans to meet again this afternoon, and to consider the foreign aid bill together with the 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill.

"If we cut on the domestic front we have to cut foreign spending too," Martin told reporters. He declined to guess at the figure, although Representative Lawrence Smith (R., Wis.), a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said he would propose lopping 150 million from the European recovery funds, and striking out 100 million for Korea and 45 million for technical help under the so-called Point Four program.

It was anybody's guess what would happen to the proposal to substitute a billion dollars' worth of surplus commodities for cash in third-year Marshall Plan operations. Farm representatives of both parties oppose this plan, put into the bill by the Foreign Affairs Committee, but Martin said most members of the policy committee favored it.

At least one echo of Senator Vandenberg's week-end appeal came from the House side yesterday, and from a fellow-Republican. Representative Jacob K. Javits said he would introduce an amendment calling for a nonpartisan committee along the lines of Vandenberg's proposal to advise the President and Congress about the economic problems of Marshall Plan countries after 1952, and the resources and measures needed to deal with them.

Other House Republicans disliked this emphasis on continued American aid after 1952, and said privately that they thought Javits' action would do the bill no good. But on the other side of the Capitol Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), a consistent critic of foreign aid programs, supported Vandenberg's idea.

Taft thought such a nonpartisan survey could well include a study of President Truman's Point Four proposal for technical help to backward areas. "There is no doubt in my mind," said Taft, "that we will have to continue to give some kind of aid to the anti-Communist nations after the Marshall Plan ends."

The stream of debate on the foreign aid bill meandered on for more than four hours yesterday in a House that was never more than a quarter full. Republican opponents found an ally in Representative Vito Marcantonio (A.L.P., N. Y.), who declared the Marshall Plan had been a failure.

Board of Trade To Hear Sesqui Details Tonight

Members of the Washington Board of Trade will hear detailed plans for the Sesquicentennial celebration here at a general membership meeting at 8 p. m. today at the Hotel Statler.

Paul Massman, newly appointed Sesqui general manager, will speak after presentation by Carter T. Barron, a Board of Trade director and Sesqui executive vice president. Miss Claudia Pinza, lyric soprano, will sing.

Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. D.) will speak on "What Challenges Our Freedom?" and C. J. Mack, general chairman of the Cherry Blossom Festival will discuss that event. An exhibit of paintings owned or painted by Board of Trade members will take place before and after the meeting.

Girl Dies of Leukemia Despite Blood Change

Chicago, March 27 (U.P.).—Three-year-old Carole Ann Conley, who was given a complete change of blood two months ago in an effort to save her from acute leukemia, died today.

She had relapsed recently after showing an apparent improvement after an operation in which doctors pumped out all her own blood and filled her veins with blood from healthy persons.

Fifty-six persons donated blood.

Husband Says He Agreed to Wife's Abortion

one could tell what happened."

On the first visit—about 12:30 a. m., January 5—Campbell testified, Myers opened the apartment door, identified himself as "Mr. Bigelow," said that Mrs. Campbell was not in the apartment, and told Campbell: "You better be a good boy and go home before you get hurt."

Myers was in "a frantic state" at the time, Campbell said, "his hair all over his eyes, his shirttails out, and a whisky bottle in his hand."

"I was more or less scared of him and walked away," Campbell said.

On the second visit to the apartment in search of his wife—about 3 a. m. January 5—Campbell testified, no one answered his knock, but "I got down on my hands and knees and looked under the door and saw lights and an object lying in the middle of the room that appared to be a corpse."

Campbell said he returned to his home at 4800 O st., Hillside, Md., and "just sat there wondering what to do and what had happened."

At approximately 3 p. m., January 5, Campbell said he notified police, who accompanied him on his third visit to the apartment.

"You and your wfe decided you wanted the child killed, is that right?" Laughlin started his cross-examination.

"Not killed, not killed, not killed . . . the child, not the mother," he answered, then loosened his red and blue necktie and unbuttoned his collar.

"It was your idea, was it not?"

"Both of us."

"You were in favor of destroying the child with all your heart and soul?"

"I wouldn't put my heart and soul in it. That's the way you're putting it, not me."

Campbell testified he asked his 29-year-old aunt, Mrs. Mabel Earnshaw, to arrange the obortion because "I turn to her for anything I want. I felt she would help us, because she loved us."

"I did not stop to think how serious it was, maybe because I am too young," he continued. Campbell testified earlier he married at 17, when his wife was 16.

"I must have wanted to do it, because she did do it, even though it was wrong," Campbell replied when Laughlin asked him to describe the "mechanics of the abortion."

He said he had been paid $61 on January 4, the afternoon before his wife died and he gave her the money for the abortion, "two 20s and a 10."

Laughlin turned to the clothes Mrs. Campbell was wearing on the night she was killed and asked Campbell to describe them. Dressed himself in a gray plaid suit, with green socks and tie of modern design, Campbell replied: "She did dress in all new clothes from the skin out." Christmas clothes, they were, he said.

Laughlin wanted to know about every garment she was wearing.

"You think I should tell about what underwear she was wearing? Well, I think that's personal. She wore green suede shoes with platform soles, a sand tan dress, a net around the neck and sequins, a light grey fur coat, a watch, a wedding ring, and an engagement ring."

What was Campbell doing at his home from 9 p. m., when his wife and Mrs. Earnshaw left for the Fairmont st., address and midnight when he went there? Laughlin asked.

"Watching television and eating a sandwich," he replied.

"Were you nervous?"

"No, I was not."

"Nothing was troubling you?"

"No."

Laughlin persistently asked Campbell why he did not call the police during his search for his wife.

"For the simple reason I would not believe my wife was dead. She was so young. . . . She (Mrs. Earnshaw) said she had been told that somebody believed she was dead, not that she was dead. . . . I didn't want to make a scandal for her if she was still alive . . ." he answered.

Campbell told Laughlin that when he did finally call the Missing Persons Bureau on January 5, "I didn't tell them the exact facts in case nothing had happened—just to get them up there and in there (the apartment)."

Hog Price Prop Cash May Be Used Up Soon

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Unless Congress works faster than usual, price supports on hogs may end this week. Supports for eggs and naval stores, and other commodities also may be in danger.

The new farm law makes price supports mandatory for two groups of farm commodities—the so-called "basics" or storable items, and a list, of "designated non-basics."

The 1949 law dropped pork and eggs from "designated non-basics." As a result pork, eggs, naval stores, and so forth, are supported at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, only after he has determined there are funds available for mandatory price support programs.

One of the first bills offered—January was a measure granting the Commodity Credit Corporation another two billion dollars for price supports. Agriculture officials told Congress that there was only enough left of the 4750 million dollars granted earlier to run the present mandatory programs for the rest of this year.

The bill was passed by the House last week. A Senate Agriculture subcommittee recommended it to the full committee yesterdayp. That body will act on it Wednesday. Observers see little chance of final action by the Senate this week.

The present price support program on hogs expires Friday which may at the least cause marketing confusion until a new program is announced. A new program to begin April 1 was expected to be announced this week.

The support program for eggs, which calls for a floor of 25 cents a dozen at the farm in Minwestern States, is for an indefinite period. Brannan can cancel it at any time. Unless prompt congressional action on the CCC bill develops, he may decide he cannot continue the egg program beyond this week.

The Ellender subcommittee yesterday dropped from the CCC bill a provision by Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) requiring the Government to use private grain trade facilities in its grain purchases. It also discussed, but did not act on an amendment by Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) to shut off agricultural exports if domestic supplies of crops receiving price supports are sufficient.

Tidal Basin Water Show Canceled

JOAN MALSTROM

DOLORES I. COLLIER
. . . South Dakota's Choice

The water pageant at the Tidal Basin scheduled as part of the Cherry Blossom Festival this weekend has been canceled, it was announced yesterday.

The announcement came from the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade shortly after National Capital Parks plant experts declared there was no chance of having blossoms on Washington's famed Japanese cherry trees in time for the Festival.

Emphasizing that the rest of the show would go on as planned, festival officials said the water pageant planned for Saturday and Sunday nights had to be called off because rough water on the Tidal Basin had ruled out any rehearsals during the past week.

The stubborn blossoms, held back by cool weather of the past week or two, may be out by the middle of next week, in time for Easter, reported George W. Harding, National Capital Parks chief of horticulture.

The trees, which will be examined again today, need at least five days of better than 70-degree weather and warm nights to bloom, and a cool spell is expected starting Wednesday, Harding said.

The festival's main event will be a musical revue entitled "Spring Is a Wonderful Thing," to be given at 2 p. m. on Saturday and 2:30 p. m. on Sunday, at the Watergate amphitheater.

On Saturday, it will be preceded at 1 p. m. by a Navy Hour broadcast by the Navy Band, with brief talks by Secretary of the Navy Matthews, Chairman C. J. Mack of the festival committee, and the Cherry Blossom Queen.

Other features will be "Ballet Soiree," danced by a group under Miss Marion Venable, and songs by Kay DeWitt, who will portray Miss Sesquicentennial.

Among the festival events will be a reception and supper dance at 9:30 p. m. Friday at the Shoreham Hotel, where the Queen will be chosen from princesses representing the 48 States.

A call for listings of rooms in homes and boarding houses that will be available for Cherry Blossom Festival and later spring visitors was issued yesterday. Any persons having such accommodations are asked to telephone the Greater National Capital Committee at REpublic 2600.

Layoffs Hit Lowest Level In 6 Months

Industrial layoffs declined to the lowest level since September in the week ending March 18, the Bureau of Employment Security said yesterday.

New unemployment compensation claims for the week totaled 250,000 compared with 274,800 for the previous week and an average of 378,100 per week in January.

The initial claims for unemployment insurance are an index to new layoffs.

Bureau Director Robert C. Goodwin said continued claims, filed by workers unemployed for at least one week, declined from 2,260,000 to 2,191,000 in the week ending March 18, a new low level for the year.

He said some of the decline in continued claims was because many jobless workers have used up their unemployment insurance. Almost 600,000 unemployed exhausted their insurance rights during the last quarter of 1949, Goodwin said.

State Commission Authorizes Phone Rate Rise in Virginia

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Virginia State Corporation Commission in Richmond yesterday ordered an increase in telephone monthly rates throughout the State ranging from 25 to 75 cents a month, starting April 1.

In approving the rate rise, the commission trimmed $621,000 from the company's request for four million dollars more in annual revenues. One member of the three-man board wanted to cut $1,289,784 from the amount asked.

The decision was rendered on the basis of hearings started last June. About 25 Virginia towns and counties including Arlington County, hired counsel through the League of Virginia Municipalities of oppose the proposed increase. About 70,000 users in nearby Virginia are affected by the increase.

John M. Howard, general commercial manager of the C. & P. companies, announced: Monthly rates charged by the Chesapeake & Telephone Co. of Virginia will increase as follows:

Local area rates—residential, individual line—Alexandria, $4 to $4.25; Arlington, $4 to $4.75; Falls Church and part of Fairfax County, $4 to $4.75; two-party line—Alexandria, $3.50 to $3.75; Arlington, $3.50 to $4; Falls Church and part of Fairfax, $3.50 to $4.

Extended area rates—residential, individual line, in all three areas, $5.25 to $6; two-party line, $4.50 to $5.

Business telephone rates for extended area will change from $4.50 for 50 calls to $7.50 for 80 calls, with additional ones at 5 cents each. Local area business rates will go from $8.50 to $9 for unlimited service.

Extended rates permit calls to Washington at no additional charge.

NLRB Rules Firm Must Give Union Merit-Raise Data

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that a company must tell the union what merit raises it gives its workers, even if the union does not bargain for the increases.

But the NLRB said that if the contract waived the union's right to bargain for individual merit raises, the company did not have to notify it until after the pay boosts were granted.

The ruling, in effect, gave unions the power to obtain information on individual merit-wage increases unless their contracts specifically waive that right.

The case involved the International Association of Machinists, an independent union, and the General Controls Co. of Glendale, Calif., maker of automatic pressure and control devices.

Lobbying Witness Suggests Congressmen List All Income, Business Links Yearly

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A dual approach to the lobbying problem was proposed to Congress yesterday by Prof. Stephen K. Bailey of Wesleyan University.

Bailey, author of "Congress Makes a Law," suggested:

1. That members of Congress be required once a year to state all their business and professional connections and sources of income.

2. That lobbyists be required to state with which members of Congress they work most.

Denies Inference of Impropriety

Representative Charles Halleck (R., Ind.) asked the professor if the inference was that members of Congress have been paid money which has influenced their opinions.

Denying exactly that inference, the professor spoke of "inarticulate major premises." He did not clarify the term.

In opening the hearings Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) said the committee was trying to do a "constructive, fair, objective job."

"The very word lobbying has developed unfavorable connotations over the years," Buchanan said. "One reason for that may be that most congressional investigations in the past were designed to show up fraud of corruption or sinister or evil practices.

Thinks Lobbying Necessary

"I personally look upon lobbying as necessary and essential. While lobbying in itself is not an evil, there are evils in lobbying."

Bailey proposed that the committee study the National Association of Manufacturers to find out whether it is a "holding company for a variety of seemingly independent pressure groups, and a conditioner of rural opinions."

"It sems to me that this relationship between business and agricultural opinion needs further exploration," he said.

Dr. Hadley Cantril, professor of psychology and director of public opinion research at Princeton University, also testified that lobbies for veterans, labor and farmers are often misleading.

He testified that in 1943 when farm "leaders" told Congress farmers favored subsidies, a survey showed that only 14 percent knew what a subsidy was. More than half, he said, "hadn't the vaguest idea."

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) interjected that he had no confidence in public opinion surveys either.

Buchanan asked Cantril about the value of political slogans. He mentioned especially the slogan "Liberty vs. Socialism" which the Republicans are said to have adopted for this year's congressional election campaign.

Cantril said the slogan "might boomerang and the opposition might get a slogan that would undermine it by defining socialism in terms of security."

"We'll take our chances on its boomeranging," quipped Halleck.

Four political science "experts" will hold a round-table discussion today on the general theme of "The Legislative Theory of Identification and/or Registration of Legislative Bodies of the United States."

Macy Assails Criticism of Steel Price Rise

Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.), said yesterday he will ask Congress to approve a "continuing" investigation of the steel industry to ward off repeated inquiries "plaguing" the manufacturers.

Macy attacked a report by the Joint Economics Committee which labeled as "unwarranted" the steel price rises of last December.

The report, Macy said, "sounds like a blueprint for socialism" and an effort to "lay the groundwork for a nationalized industry."

Macy said his proposal would set up a permanent bipartisan committee to carry on a continual study of the steel industry to avoid recurrent investigations which might upset the business.

In New York Chairman Irving S. Olds of U. S. Steel Corp., said "the majority report appears to ignore entirely our testimony about the recent increases in our costs." He added:

"We raised our steel prices for the simple reason that our earnings are not sufficient to permit the absorption of these large increases in our costs, estimated to amount to around 75 milion dollars a year."

The corporation reported recently its net earnings for 1949 totaled $165,908,329.

In Pittsburgh, Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corp., said:

"The majority report . . . is such a complete misrepresentation of the actual situation existing in the steel industry that it is amazing."

Carnahan to Speak

Representative A. S. J. Carnahan (D., Mo.), member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, will address a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today at the Congressional Hotel, of the University of Missouri Association.

White House Gavels May Go To Governors

President Truman wants each State Governor to get a souvenir gavel made from historic wood of the White House.

The President has told the Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion about his idea, and Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.), a member of the commission, heartily indorsed it yesterday in a speech to the Senate.

Martin added the suggestion that the President, Cabinet officers and members of Congress be given similar gavels.

Martin said the President's suggestion came to the commission informally while it was at work on a plan to dispose of the historic materials removed from the White House during remodeling.

He said more than three-quarters of a million pieces of the White House will be available for distribution. He said of the 790,000 souvenir units, 5000 are large pieces of stone and wood suitable for mantlepieces or fireplaces, and the rest are smaller pieces, including timbers, bricks, facing stones, panels suitable for souvenirs and mementoes.

Martin said one proposal for the distribution is to make it through members of Congress in proportion to State populations. Recipients would pay packing, handling and freight charges.

He invited Senators to send suggestions to the commission for the souvenir distribution.

Death of MP Cuts Labor's Majority to 3

London, March 27 (AP).—The Labor Party's majority in Commons was reduced to three today by the death of F. A. Cobb, Labor member from Yorkshire.

Cobb's death means a third by-election must be held to fill seats won by Labor candidates in the general election of February 23.

One seat was thrown open by the death of Adam McKinlay, the Scot Labor member from West Dumbartonshire.

Another vacancy occurred when a Labor member resigned to make way for Solicitor General Frank Soskice, who was defeated in the election.

Soskice's nomination for the by-election in the Neepsend division of Sheffield, where the Labor member had won by a 19,000 majority, was received there today. His opponents are Conservative-Liberal John Philip Hunt and Communist E. Leslie Moore. This by-election will be held April 5.

Commission Split

Ship Subsidy Inquiry Ends In a Flare-Up

By The Associated Press

A congressional hearing into how the Maritime Commission figures subsidy payments to the shipping industry ended last night in a flare-up between members of the commission.

The squabble came as a House subcommittee on expenditures closed eight weeks of hearings on a report from Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren charging the Commission with "irregularities" in determining subsidies and in selling surplus war-built ships.

Last night's controversy was touched off by the introduction as evidence of a letter written by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, chairman of the five-man commission, to Attorney General McGrath defending the commission's action. Fleming addressed his letter to the Attorney General on request of President Truman but there was no explanation of why that course was followed.

Representative Hardy (D., Va.), the committee chairman, then asked if Fleming's views were those of the entire commission. Two other members—Grenville Mellen and Joseph Carson—said they "subscribed" to the general's views.

Outspoken opposition was voiced, however, by Commissioner Raymond McKeough. He asserted that the Comptroller General's report showed he was "no longer in the minority" in voting against many of the subsidy payments approved by the Commission as a whole.

In a cross-fire of words, Commissioner Mellen expressed belief that "it is far more than coincidental that McKeough's dissents coincided with the Comptroller General."

The report from Warren was a 208-page printed study of most of the Commission's activities since the end of the war. It charged the agency had "gone beyond the law" in some instances in selling warbuilt ships and had been lax in figuring how much Federal aid should be given for new ship construction and operation.

The fifth member of the commission—David Coddaire—did not attend the hearing last night.

Fleming told the session that the commission is "presently re-examining its subsidy picture" and said he is "hopeful" that the agency may be able to rewrite some of its contracts.

Legislation denying the Immigration Service authority to deport an alien without a hearing last night was predicted by angry members of a special House Judiciary subcommittee.

An Immigration Service official had just ignored a Congressional subpoena to produce Mrs. Ellen Knauff, German war bride, being held for deportation at Ellis Island. Subcommittee members said she has never had a hearing.

The House subcommittee, headed by Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), weighed possible contempt proceedings against Edward J. Shaughnessy, District director of the Immigration Service, when he failed to bring in the witness.

Curb "Absolute Power"

Walter meanwhile told newsmen he will press for a change in the immigration laws to curb "some of this absolute power exerted by Immigration officials."

"That man (Shaughnessy) has too much power," he told reporters following the hearing.

The subcommittee postponed action for the time being however on (1) proposed contempt proceedings against Shaughnessy and (2) Walter's bill to cancel the deportation order against Mrs. Knauff.

Walter said the action was delayed pending a report from the Justice Department on Mrs. Knauff as a security risk.

Case Still Before Court

A. R. Mackey, deputy immigration commissioner, rose from the audience during the subcommittee meeting to say Shaughnessy had ignored the subpena at his direction because Mrs. Knauff's case is being reviewed in Federal Court."

In New York, an immigration official told Associated Press: "It seems we have a choice of being in contempt either of the court or the House subcommittee."

Walter said, however, that a judiciary committee agent received an informal opinion from a member of the court that it would be alright for Shaughnessy to bring Mrs. Knauff before the committee.

Married to Kurt W. Knauff, a former American soldier, Mrs. Knauff tried to enter the country in August, 1948. She was released on bond after being held at Ellis Island for eight months, but was returned to Ellis Island last month.

Only Case of its Kind

She served five years with the British Royal Air Force and for more than two years with the American military government in Europe. Her husband is now a civilian employe with occupation forces in Frankfurt, Germany.

"Mrs. Knauff doesn't know why she is being held," said Walter. "No explanation has ever been given except that she is a poor security risk."

Ban on Hiring Halls Stands

The Supreme Court yesterday again refused to consider the legality of seamen's hiring halls, thus raising the threat of an eventual maritime strike on all coasts.

The court's refusal means that a lower court decision outlawing the hiring halls will stand.

Just before the court began what will be three days of hearings on the Louisiana and Texas tidelands oil cases, these other decisions were announced:

1. It refused to consider the Baltimore case of seven persons fined for disturbing the peace by staging an interracial tennis tournament. Maryland, in fighting the case, insisted it did not amount to a test of Baltimore's segregation policy.

2. The court overturned, 8 to 0, a finding of the Court of Claims that the Standard-Vacuum Oil Co. could not sue the Government for wartime losses in the Philippines. Justice Minton wrote the opinion.

3. It set aside, 4 to 3, a lower court decision that railroad workers demoted or dismissed because of construction of New Orleans' union station are not entitled to certain benefits.

4. It ruled, 5 to 2, that the Government should pay only the OPA ceiling price for black pepper requisitioned by the War Department during the war from the Commodities Trading Corp. of New York.

5. It upheld the Interstate Commerce Commission, 6 to 1, in a case involving switching services of Western railroads.

One on the Aisle—

By Richard L. Coe

"THREE CAME HOME," at the Palace, is a better-than-average movie and an extremely interesting picture of life in a Japanese prison camp during the war. So far, it ranks with the better pictures of 1950.

The fact remains, however, it seems to me to lack a good deal of what Agnes Newton Keith's engrossing book had to say. In "Three Came Home," the American girl who married a British colonial administrator makes much of the idea that war is the real enemy of man, that the enemy is the victim not of himself but of war. She pointedly tells us that she has written the book mainly as a voice against war.

The world being in so tentative a frame of mind about war, its necessity as an answer to cruelty, greed and wickedness, the makers of the film have muted Mrs. Keith's perspective. In his adaptation, Nunnally Johnson has apparently feared to plumb the long view which distinguished Mrs. Keith's book, although in certain aspects he has done a fine job.

Mrs. Keith's narrative told simply of her life in Borneo, her little boy and her husband and how, when war came, the Japs finally took over the civilians and ultimately moved them from one prison camp to another. Her detailed descriptions of how each day was spent, how dirt, filth and the barest necessities of life became the accepted norm, how she protected her young son, after losing a child during pregnancy, how the different personalities in the camp reacted and how their jailors behaved formed the body of her quiet, impassioned story.

Johnson does not come off as well as Mrs. Keith did in describing the Japanese colonel who became the symbol of her theme. One of her most revealing descriptions was in the colonel's picnic for several children, including her own son. In the film this party is shifted to occur after the news that Jap surrender is assured and after he has lost his family on Hiroshima.

Incident Shifted

This, it seems to me, is a critical fault. It is too easy to ascribe the colonel's kindness as the result of knowing that his side was defeated, that his own family was lost. By shifting this incident, Mrs. Keith's sympathetic portrait of a tragic figure has been lost and a good deal of her story's point.

It would have taken, evidently, more courage than was at Twentieth Century-Fox's disposal to have made the picture the stirringly civilized book which Mrs. Keith gave us.

The technique of using her voice to describe events while thinking about them is vastly helpful, and Claudette Colbert does nicely by the role. Marc Keuning is fine as her little boy and the settings are especially convincing. Sessue Haykawa returns to our film world as the colonel.

It is good to have a film version of Mrs. Keith's fine book, but it would have been bettered by more faithful reflection of her wise, if lonely, viewpoint.

"THREE CAME HOME," a Twentieth-Century Fox release, produced by Nunnally Johnson, directed by Jean Negulesco, screenplay by Johnson from the book by Agnes Newton Keith. At the Palace.

About 18 blocks fro mthe scene of the holdup, they pushed Smith out of the cab and shot him as he lay on the ground in front of 123 4th st. ne., according to a witness.

Shortly before 10 p. m., police found the cab—Cab No. 25 of the Allied Cab Co.—abandoned in the 200 block of G st. sw.

The bandit who staged the holdup was described as about 23, thin build, brown skin, wearing an odd-color dirty blue topcoat and armed with a rusty gun. There was no immediate description available on the second man.

Police said they believed the gunmen also robbed the cab driver.

Postlude

Artists Well Matched In Sonatas

By Paul Hume

It takes a good violinist and a good pianist to make a program of four sonatas for those instruments interesting.

Last night George Bennet and Edwin Davis quickly secured, and easily retained a high degree of interest from an audience in the Phillips Gallery. Their sonatas were chosen from those of Handel, Beethovan, Walter Piston and Brahms.

Such choices contain all the demands a violinist is ever called upon to meet, and somewhat more than many concert pianists ever allow themselves to encounter. Bennet's violin playing was a constant source of admiration. He was well matched in his pianist-partner, Davis.

These two rightly began with the premise that all four sonatas were devised for two equal instruments. Bennet has both tone and technique to match the largest piano's rapid fire. And Davis is both musician and showman enough to balance his thunder with sensitive delicacy.

Style came from both players in a wholly natural way. Handel's gracious phrases were round and suave when they ought to have been, and rapid figurations came through with accuracy. His D Major opus was followed by Beethoven's F Major sonata, the one with the apropriate subtitle, "Spring."

Bennet became even more assured as he worked through this familiar music. Only in the rondo's maze did he sometimes falter for a moment in miniscule matters of absolute precision or double stopping. It was at this point too, that his tone, in pizzicato, was slightly muffled.

Otherwise, and notably so in Walter Piston's noble and exciting sonata, he realized all that was implicit in his program. The Piston work it a great piece, written with that sound knowledge and gift for form that marks its composer. Brahms' D Minor sonata likewise found true understanding and mastery in these two fine artists, hands — no small accomplishment.

Larceny Charge Warrant Served On W. L. Lebling

William L. Lebling, 53, of Dickerson, Md., a Bethesda real estate man, was arrested in Rockville yesterday afternoon, charged with embezzlement and larceny after trust.

He was released under $3500 bond last night for appearance in Circuit Court in Rockville Thursday for arraignment. Lebling is a member of the Lebling Real Estate Co., 7200 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda.

His arrest, by Montgomery County Detective Sergts. John Leahy and William Whalen, followed indictments handed down last Thursday by the county grand jury.

Lebling was arrested on a bench warrant issued by Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward.

School Employe Hurt in Rockville

A Montgomery County Board of Education employe received head and shoulder injuries yesterday when a 500-pound crate of table tops fell on him as he was helping to unload a truck at the board's Rockville office.

The man, Ernest Allnutt, 31, of Sellman, was treated at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, and released after X-rays showed no fractures.

Sells Many In One

Paul Raeburn sells many office typewriters in one—because he sells SMITH-CORONA, the typewriter that features Interchangeable Platens. If you'd like to know more about this important SMITH-CORONA advantage, phone Paul Raeburn at MIchigan 6900 and ask for a complete demonstration. He'll arrange it at a time when it's convenient for you.

across the middle of the street, he added.

He said he believed the proposed traffic light plus a chain barricade in front of the entrance of the club —"to slow up the boys"—would be an effective safety measure.

Police said the 5-year-old who was killed yesterday had darted from a triangular island in 17th st. and started across the street toward the Boys Club.

Technical Charge

A dump truck, being operated south on 17th st., by Wilson E. Jones, 41, of 1318 13th st. nw., struck the boy and the left rear wheel passed over him. A technical charge of "hold for the coroner "was placed against Jones by police and he was released in custody of his employer.

Although the child was too young to be a member of the club, he was racing to the club to watch selection of a basketball team, according to his grandfather, Bernard Spalding of the 15th st. address.

Spalding said the team selected was to play a game last night at Bolling Air Force Base and he had promised to take his grandson to the game.

The boy's mother is Mrs. Bernadette Stibli. She has a younger child, Robert, 3.

Two Children Escape

Two children from the Congress Heights School narrowly escaped serious injury at 3 p. m. at a school crossing in the 3000 block of Nichols ave. se.

Police Corp. B. E. Darr had halted traffic to allow the children to cross the street. Two children had started across when an automobile whipped around two halted cars.

Darr ran to the children. He grabbed Donald Dunning, 8, of 402 Newcomb st. se., and pulled him back from the car's path. The car brushed the policeman and the boy.

The second child, Jane Riegeloman, 6, of 435 Newcomb st. se., was struck lightly. She was released from Gallinger Hospital after treatment for minor bruises.

Police identified the driver as George H. Cook, 36, of 6900 Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill, Md. He was charged with failing to yield the right-of-way to a pedestrian and freed in $25 collateral for a hearing April 5 in the office of the Corporation Counsel.

Robert L. Wacker, 4, son of Mr and Mrs. Thomas Wacker, of 5555 Wessling lane, Bethesda, Md., was in a semiconscious state at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, last night after being struck by a cab near his home. The hospital said the child's condition was "undetermined."

Police said he was struck while riding his tricycle on Fairfax rd. at about 4:30 p. m. He was taken to the hospital by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad.

The car driver was identified by police as Worthington C. Lent, 21, of 5209 Roosevelt st., Bethesda.

Man Seized In Auto of Policeman

What would you do if you returned to your parked car and found a stranger sitting inside opening a pack of your cigarettes?

If you were Pvt. Charles A. Scott of the Tenth Precinct you could toss the stranger into the pokey. He did.

Scott, off duty yesterday, went to the Municipal Building to obtain new license tags. He parked his car on John Marshall pl. near C st. nw. When he returned about 30 minutes later there was the stranger sitting in his car.

"What are you doing in my car, bud?" inquired Scott.

"Why, do you own it?" asked the stranger.

The policeman assured him he did and the stranger said a man had told him to wait in the car and that he would give him a job.

Scott remarked that it was his pack of cigarettes the stranger was about to open.

"Hmmm," pondered the stranger, "they were given to me by the guy who told me to wait in the car."

Scott returned to the Municipal Building—with the stranger—and booked him at the First Precinct on charges of tampering with an automobile and petty larceny.

The stranger identified himself as Ben Doby, 50, of no fixed address. Scott said Doby's record shows two previous arrests for petty thefts from automobiles.

The Personal Equation

Reckless drivers like Senator McCarthy seem to forget that the people they knock about in their mad careenings are live, flesh-and-blood individuals. A reminder of this has come from Haldore Hanson, a State Department employe, one of the Senator's hapless victims. In a letter to Senator Tydings, he reported that neighbors near a farm he owns in Loudoun County, Va., have begun referring to him as a "Communist" and a "Russian spy" and that a petition has been circulated calling his family undesirable and urging their expulsion from the community. Much the same harassment was reported by Mrs. Esther Brunauer in testimony before the Tydings Subcommittee yesterday. Neighborhood communities are liable to believe what they are told by a United States Senator—even when what they are told is unsupported by any evidence whatever.

Senator McCarthy has not hitherto displayed a sensitivity that could lead one to expect him to show much concern about these collateral consequences of his recklessness. But there ought to be real concern on the part of his colleagues in the Senate. For it is on that body that the darkest shadow of the Senator's conduct falls. The American people, for all their anxiety about communism, have not lost their sense of fair play. It is still considered profoundly un-American to hit a man who has no means of hitting back. Senator McCarthy has been using the immunity conferred on him by his membership in the Senate to hit men like Haldore Hanson who have no chance to return the blow. The spectacle is an unedifying one.

Roadblocks To Trade

The review of current trends in foreign trade policy appearing in the Foreign Commerce Weekly has pertinence to Senator Vandenberg's proposal for another Harriman Commission. The writer, Dr. Henry Chalmers, notes that so far very limited progress has been made toward loosening up governmental controls over foreign trade. Although western European countries under pressure from ECA have begun to relax restrictions on imports in their trade with one another, elsewhere "there have been few basic changes in the structure of restrictive trade controls." During the past year, in fact, a number of countries tightened their controls over foreign trade. South Africa and the Philippine Republic, for example, imposed new and sweeping restrictions on imports, while sterling area countries made further cuts in their purchases from dollar areas.

The survey states that out of 85 foreign countries and colonies embracing most of the trading world, all but eight require official licenses to be obtained for the importation of many products or else they control grants of foreign exchange required to pay for imports or do both. Quite a number of countries also prohibit the importation of certain classes of goods. The chief reason for this world network of trade restrictions, as Dr. Chalmers says, is that very few countries are able to pay for the exceptionally large volume of goods that their people would like to import.

There are quite a number of countries whose over-all balance of international payments is reasonably satisfactory that would have little, if any, difficulty in paying at least for needed imports, if the currencies of most trading countries were convertible. For they could then use the foreign currencies earned from their surplus of exports to certain countries to meet deficits on trade account with other countries. And they would not be under such great pressure, as they now are, to increase exports to dollar markets and restrict imports from dollar areas. While currency convertibility cannot be achieved overnight, it is the essential condition of multilateral trading, and the only ultimate solution of the problem of the so-called dollar gap. That is why the ECA has been urging participating countries to adopt a system of clearing that will provide for a return to currency convertibility within Europe and pave the way for an extension of convertibility to other areas.

As Dr. Chalmers says, the demand for imports has been abnormally stimulated in many cases by domestic inflation. Restrictions on imports made necessary by such conditions unfortunately do not reduce the pressure of import demands; they merely restrain demand. Consequently import controls threaten to become permanent barriers to free exchange of goods in the absence of domestic financial reforms, such as reduction of Government expenditures, effective controls over credit, and curtailment of expenditures for overambitious investment projects.

Although balance of payments difficulties were initially responsible for the imposition of import quotas and exchange restrictions, a good deal of the current resistance to removal of these restrictions comes from industrial groups that have been protected from competition by such means. The longer such controls continue the more difficult it will be to overcome the opposition of the special interests that find shelter behind trade barriers that are harder to penetrate than tariff walls. This tendency to regard import restrictions as protective devices instead of measures adopted to tide countries over an emergency is a dangerous development that will have to be aggressively fought and put down. Otherwise the hoped-for return to a system of multilateral trading is likely to be indefinitely deferred.

The Man At The Top

So Senator McCarthy's top Soviet spy in the United States—the man on whose case the Senator stands or falls—is Owen Lattimore, director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins. An analysis of the "file" about him has now been shown the Tydings Subcommittee. In addition, Mr. Lattimore is hurrying back home, presumably to demand a hearing, with the possibility, also, that he may prefer a slander suit against Senator McCarthy. It is clear that his usefulness in his present work in Afghanistan has been impaired, if not undermined; he has been on a mission there for the United Nations.

Mr. Lattimore happens to be perhaps the leading American authority on Inner Asia. He has written a round dozen books on that huge arc of land stretching from the Yellow Sea through Manchuria, Mongolia, Sinkiang along to the northwestern frontier of India. For his work he has the esteem of literati on both sides of the Atlantic. If his volumes are merely fronts for Soviet Russia, hundreds of scholars will be rated as dunces, Johns Hopkins, the haven of sedition, and organizations throughout this country and most of the important newspapers carriers of propaganda. A further detail about Mr. Lattimore's work in Inner Asia was provided in Mr. Drew Pearson's statement on Sunday that Mr. Lattimore had provided an asylum in Baltimore for two Mongol princes and the high priest of Mongolia who were in danger of their lives from the Russians. Guilt by association, indeed!

At times we have been at variance with some of Mr. Lattimore's conclusions. But whatever sections may be torn out of the context of his writings, whatever joining he has indulged in, we feel confident that he will be able to divest himself of the atrocious label that Mr. McCarthy has pinned on him. The Russians are not so silly as Senator McCarthy makes out. On analogy the top Soviet spy in this country would be somebody now occupying a seat near or with the mighty, someone who is a rabid anti-Communist engaged in keeping the animals stirred up. That, at any rate, is the sort of activity that would fall under the head of "strategy of terror." As Mr. Edmond Taylor explained that strategy in the book by that name, the technique in France was to get the masterminds in Nazi expansion in France to join anti-Nazi groups. In Japan there was the case of the Soviet spy, Sorge, who actually became the Emperor's counsellor—perhaps the leading illustration of planting a spy in the least obvious place. The only safeguard against this kind of thing is to keep the national eye on the ball and to rely upon the FBI.

The Hickenlooper charges, says Dr. Frederick Seitz, in the latest issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, have "probably done as much to impede the progress of that organization (the AEC) as could a number of well-placed Russian agents." As much could be said of the McCarthy charges. The fantastic nature of these charges is already clear in the record. Mr. Lattimore's name is being used to expose the State Department, but he has nothing to do with the State Department. Senator McCarthy says that he still has a desk in the department, yet nobody else seems to have seen it. Five years ago he was on the department's payroll as an expert attached to the Pauley reparation mission to Japan. Whether the selection was Mr. Pauley's or the State Department's is immaterial; his experience and his knowledge would entitle him to consideration on any mission of such a nature. Before his work on the Pauley mission Mr. Lattimore was in the Office of War Information and prior to that was adviser to Chiang Kai-shek on White House recommendation. The most conspicuous item in his record at Chungking was his opposition, in behalf of Chiang, to Secretary Hull's trial balloon for a "limited accord" with Japan in an effort to stave off hostilities. What this record has to do with the McCarthy charge is as much of a mystery as how Mr. Lattimore's extracurricular activities bear out that charge.

Polluted Potomac

The warning by the superintendent of Washington's sewage treatment plant that the Potomac River will become a "cesspool" unless sewage facilities are improved was by no means a cry of "wolf." Like the water distribution system, the sewage treatment plant has been strained beyond capacity by the great increase in population in the Washington area. As a result sewage going into the river is adding to the pollution below Hains Point. This pollution is increased, to be sure, by the fact that sewage from Alexandria, part of Arlington and part of Fairfax County is dumped raw into the Potomac. But certainly adequate plant facilities for Washington are a first essential in attacking the growing health menace.

Aside from the health problem, there are enough examples of what the unsupervised dumping of wastes has done to wildlife elsewhere to warrant some real concern. Fortunately, the Potomac River Commission has made big strides in awakening upstream communities to their responsibilities. Frederick and Hagerstown, Md., and Winchester, Va., have improved their waste disposal methods, and Cumberland, Md., one of the worst offenders, is beginning to consider the problem. Perhaps the Virginia Water Control Board ought to be exerting more pressure on Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax.

In any event, it is clear that Washington has a major responsibility in this matter. The one million dollars extra appropriation which the District is asking annually for the next six years will permit completion of a sludge drying plant to convert sludge into fertilizer, and beyond that expansion of present treatment facilities. Along with expansion of the water system—which serves not only Washington but nearby Virginia—this is a basic and inexorable community need for which we hope Congress will have a sympathetic ear.

Gas Bogey

During the past 10 days a great amount of the Senate's time has been taken up with debate on the Kerr natural gas bill, scheduled for a vote on Wednesday. If, as proponents of the bill maintain, the measure would not alter the authority of the Federal Power Commission, there would be no point in such extended deliberation. The fact is, however, that as Senator Douglas and others have made clear, the bill would work a very substantial change in FPC authority by forbidding it to regulate the so-called independent producers of natural gas—that is, producers not affiliated with the transporters, or pipeline companies. The independents account for about 70 percent of the natural gas production, and "independent" in this sense is a euphemism for the big oil companies, which control a large share of the production.

To be sure, the provision of the Natural Gas Act which the Kerr bill would amend needs to be clarified. Nonetheless, the Supreme Court has confirmed the power of the FPC under the law. Although this regulatory power over independents has not been invoked until recently, its existence has been a restraining influence against an undue rise in natural gas prices concurrent with the tremendous expansion in use.

Patently it is impossible for the States adequately to regulate a commodity which is a natural monopoly in practically continuous interstate flow from well to stove. FPC supervision has not acted to deter free enterprise, and there is no indication that it will do so. The issue is simply whether a fundamental existing protection for consumers—industrial as well as household—should be removed to make way for possible price holdups. It is a poor indorsement to say that the Kerr bill is not so sweeping as the late unlamented Moore-Rizley bill; it is still an unmasked plea for special interest. We hope the Senate will not be fooled by the toothless substitute which Senators Kerr and Elmer Thomas would provide empowering the FPC to study the matter after regulation was removed. As Senator Brewster said in what was almost a paragon of understatement: "I very much fear that the remedial action might be so long delayed that the people for whom we are primarily responsible would find their remedy exceedingly remote."

Patronage Hunger

The hunger for patronage appears to have driven the Senate Committee on Postoffice and Civil Service into an utterly indefensible revolt against governmental reform. Last week the committee indefinitely postponed action on S. 2213, the bill designed to carry out the recommendations of the Hoover Commission on the appointment of postmasters. To "indefinitely postpone action" is a congressional euphemism for killing a bill. Unless an overwhelming public demand can change this action, an integral part of the reorganization program will go into the discard without even so much as a vote of the Senate.

The Hoover Commission found that the political appointment of 22,000 postmasters reduces efficiency and cuts off the normal rewards that ought to go to the ablest men in the postal service. Undoubtedly this clinging to postmasterships as patronage plums contributes to the postal deficit of 500 million dollars a year. To be sure, the situation is not as bad as it used to be. Postmasters can be selected only from a list approved by the Civil Service Commission after merit examinations. In fact, however, postmasterships continue to be distributed as political plums which are usually at the disposal of Senators because senatorial confirmation of the nominations is required. The bill in question would end this prerogative and give the Postmaster General authority to appoint all postmasters under civil service rules.

This reform has the indorsement not only of the Hoover Commission, a bipartisan body, but also of President Truman, Postmaster General Donaldson, the National Association of Postal Supervisors, the National League of District Postmasters, and the Senate subcommittee which studied the bill. The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report points out that no witnesses appeared in opposition to the bill at the hearings. Only the patronage hounds who dominate the full committee have revolted to save their petty patronage privileges. Their action ought to bring such a scorching from the public that they will be compelled to reverse this selfish decision.

"On Distinction"

I'd just like to make one point about the "Man of Distinction" advertising you did not make in your March 18 editorial. Would the drys want all advertisers to urge the misuse or abuse of products?

In that case, automobile manufacturers should advertise a brand new car in a smashup wrapped around a tree; sunlamp producers should advertise a blistered, well-done purchaser of the lamp; sugar refiners could illustrate how to get diabetes in 10 easy lessons, and commercial airlines might use singing commercials like this:

(Sing to the tune of "Pepsi-cola Hits the Spot.")

"Excello Airlines hits the grass
Our wings are made of paper and glass
We can get there fast as grease
But who knows whether you'll be in one piece?"

But, joking aside, things aren't as bad as the drys make it out to be. Our advertising isn't turning us into a Nation of sots. Only 1 percent of our 60 million drinkers are alcoholics and per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages in the past 100 years has decreased from 2.24 to 1.17 gallons.

The Langer bill is no answer to the social problems growing out of the abuse of alcoholic beverages. Nor is prohibition. Sincere efforts to solve those problems won't be found by hamstringing or destroying the liquor industry, but in research and cooperation between all segments of the community.

Accrued Leave

How short is the memory of the Congress! On December 21, 1944, Public Law 525 was enacted. This law was known as the "Lump-Sum Leave Act."

It was enacted for the purpose of allowing Government employes to accumulate up to 60 days of leave, and during the war years 90 days. This legislation was to permit the Government clerk to accumulate his leave and if he found himself in the "cold" and saved his leave, he had a reserve or cushion, money to be paid to him at the time of his severance. This bill was also hailed by the Government clerk as an outstanding piece of legislation, since in the event of his death, the value of the lump-sum leave accumulated would be paid to his designated beneficiary.

Today Congress contends that the 26 days of leave the employe earns should be used during the current year. Do the Congressmen realize that in the event of an emergency the Government clerk who used all of his leave would find himself in a position of being on leave without pay, or maybe find himself requesting an advance of leave for the ensuing year?

Bolshevist Threat

The March 15 article of Mr. Marquis Childs, headed "Senate Responsibility for Conduct," is magnificent.

In the heat of the moment, too many lose sight of the fact that it is not communism by itself that constitutes the danger to freedom-loving peoples, but bolshevism. Bolshevism is the use of communism by Russia as its chief arm to gain its traditional goal of world domination, a policy of expansionism that has existed since Peter the Great.

It, therefore, seems to me that in this examination of communism, it should first be determined whether Communist sympathizers are also bolshevists. Any member of the Communist Party is automatically a bolshevist through the natural sequence of things. The way the hierarchy is constituted, Communist parties, wherever they are, are directed by and responsible to Moscow and could not exist without being actively bolshevist.

We must, therefore, be certain that we are trying the real culprit. As an ideology, communism cannot compete in practice with the American concept of capitalism and in itself does not constitute a danger to us. Bolshevism is another matter and should be fought far more fiercely than we are now doing.

Greek Children

With all the help Greece has received from America, the people still barely exist. Basic commodity costs have increased—bread 167 percent, olive oil 140 percent, meat 200 percent, butter and clothing 200 percent. Wages, on the other hand, have been increased 10 percent, 18 percent and 20 percent. A laborer's salary runs from 60 to 75 cents per day; skilled mechanics receive from $1 to $1.10 per day. Educators and white collar workers fare a trifle better than skilled mechanics. Their pay is about $51 per month.

The Greeks at this point are in want—obviously. In addition, they are in fear. They fear the truth of Soviet slander; they fear that their abducted children will never be returned from behind the Iron Curtain Balkan countries where they have been interned; they fear that if these children are returned in the too distant future, they will have been so thoroughly indoctrinated with Communist ideology that they might serve as Trojan horses.

Twice the United Nations has demanded the return of Greek children — in November, 1948 and in November, 1949. Still the 28,000 abducted children—from 3 to 18 years of age—are separated from their parents and their homes.

It is in our hands to insure the return of Greek children to Greece, to restore Greece to a decent economic status, to help the Greek people stand on their own feet again proud of their self-reliant, independent nation.

Register of Wills

In these days when there is so much criticism being leveled at Government officials, may I sound a note of praise, particularly where the praise is so long overdue. I refer specifically to the administration of the Office of the Register of Wills.

It has fallen to my lot to have experience covering a period of many years in probate matters here and in other cities throughout this country. I have never seen such efficiency, courtesy, and personal attention as is given to those who have business with our D. C. probate officers.

It is an extraordinary thing that, so far as my memory goes, there has never been a word of criticism or censure against the Office of the Register of Wills, in this politically minded city. I think that much of this is due to the administration of Mr. Theodore Cogswell, the Register, and his able Chief Deputy, Mr. Melvin J. Marques. They have used rare discretion in the selection of their subordinates.

Eritrea Settlement

The Ethiopian Embassy has noticed certain tendentious news, recently published in the press, particularly in the London Times, according to which it is alleged that only Christian Eritreans desire union with Ethiopia, while Moslem Eritreans are opposed thereto.

The Ethiopian Embassy wishes to state categorically that such allegation is unfounded and is calculated to distort the truth and to mislead world public opinion. The truth is that: both Christian and Moslem Eritreans, except certain minority groups deceived by foreign bribery and propaganda, desire reunion with their mother-country, Ethiopia.

Moslems and Christians of Eritrea have always fought for the reunion of Eritrea with Ethiopia. They fought with their Ethiopian brethren against Italy when the latter invaded Ethiopia in 1935-36 and the names of Moslem Eritreans who deserted Italy to give their blood generously for the common cause have been listed in the memorandum presented by the Ethiopian government to the Paris peace conference.

British military authorities, administering Eritrea, are well aware that foreign money has been pouring into that country to bribe Eritreans to sell their freedom. It is, however, regretted that they have not been able to stop it, despite their effort and repeated warning. It must also be clear that the present disturbance in Eritrea has been artificially and deliberately created to prejudice the claim of Ethiopia and the interest of the Eritrean people, while the United Nations Commission of Inquiry is there, as well as to influence the decision of the United Nations when the Eritrean question comes up for settlement.

Guns And Children

The local press carries an account of a housewife accidentally killed by a neighbor's child of 5 who found a loaded revolver and pulled the trigger. The report states that the child was never allowed to play with dangerous weapons, only with toy guns! But how is a young child to distinguished between the make-believe and the real?

Hardly a week passes without a notice that somewhere someone has been injured, by a loaded gun in the hands of a child. And every day in every city little children play gunmen games and shoot each other with toy pistols. Is it surprising that from time to time there are real tragedies?

In the case of the local tragedy there was the terrible carelessness of leaving a loaded revolver within reach of young children. Beyond that, however, stretches the responsibility of the parents who give toy guns to their children as playthings. There is the responsibility of the manufacturers and sellers of such toys. And there is the responsibility of the manufacturers and distributors of the so-called comic books, the horror films and radio scripts that glorify acts of violence and suggest to impressionable minds the use of lethal weapons.

Douglas And The Kerr Bill

By Marquis Childs

Gas Monopoly Fight

BEING A United States Senator is really tough these days if you take your job at all seriously. In an earlier day, some highfalutin' oratory got you over the rough places.

But in the face of an issue as that presented by Senator Robert Kerr's bill to take the independent producers of natural gas out from under Federal regulation, oratory is not enough. It takes hard, thorough, conscientious digging into the facts and figures that spell out certain basic economic relationships in this country.

That hard, thorough, conscientious digging is what Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois has supplied in the controversy now moving toward a climax. His initial speech and the part he is playing in the give and take of debate constitute a remarkable performance.

Douglas has got down to the hardpan of the argument so that no one can fail to see what the realities are if they choose to.

In the background knowledge he has brought to the fore and in the way he marshals it, Douglas makes old-timers think of Senator George Norris at his best. For one thing, Douglas' presentation is completely in the American tradition. It owes nothing to any alien ideology.

The Senator from Illinois went back to the early attempts of State governments to regulate private monopoly in the gas and electric industry. Here, as he pointed out, was none of the vital force of competition which can and does under our system act to bring prices down and give the consumer value and quality.

"THIS was not," said Douglas, "public ownership. It was an attempt to avoid public ownership by providing for private ownership and operation but with public regulation to protect consumers and also investors. It was not socialism as some may imply, but America's answer to socialism."

In this last there is good American common sense. It is a sound and valid answer to the distorters who cry socialism at every form of Government activity.

But the States found themselves debarred from regulating the sale of natural gas transported from one State to another. Only the Federal Government has the power to regulate interstate commerce. For that reason, as Douglas develops the argument, Congress adopted in 1938 a law giving the Federal Government through the Federal Power Commission authority over the sale and transmission of natural gas.

In the course of the debate the Senator has presented a remarkable array of figures, statistical tables and supporting data. They show in a way difficult or impossible to refute that the so-called independent producers are for the most part the big oil companies. These companies, which in past years have shown exceedingly generous profits, would be in a position to make an extraordinary killing on the basis of the gas reserves they own and the contracts now in existence, if Congress gives them a go sign.

DOUGLAS has thoroughly analyzed these contracts and he seems to me to knock down one of Senator Kerr's chief arguments, which is that they provide for a fixed price over a long period of years. Even if the companies were freed from regulation, that is to say, they could not hike the price. But Douglas points out that most of these contracts have "favored nation" clauses providing an increase for the company if it can be shown that a higher price is being paid to another producer.

And, incidentally, throughout the debate the Senator from Illinois has kept away from name-calling. He has not felt it necessary to impugn Senator Kerr's motives. Consistently he has pounded in facts and figures and always he's come back to the main theme—that the choice is between unreasonable profits for a few producers with drastically increased prices to Northern consumers and, on the other hand, reasonable profits and comparatively low prices benefiting millions of citizens.

The vote on the Kerr bill will be closely scanned in a great many States and one reason is because Senator Douglas has contributed so much toward making the issue crystal clear. He got his preparation years ago when the jerry-built utility empire of Samuel Insull was crashing into ruin in Illinois.

They say that Paul Douglas is running for President, or anyhow Vice President. He puts this aside, sternly saying that all he wants to do is be a good Senator. And that, in my opinion, is one of the best possible ways to run for President.

House Of Commons

Having read your March 16 editorial regarding the Belgian king, I feel, as an Englishman, I must protest against your remarks regarding what you call "the sham battle of the House of Commons."

Allow me to inform you that the British Parliament is never so healthy as when a government has to fight for its life and very existence, when defeat by only one vote would mean its resignation.

When I look around the world, I am faced with a slight obfuscation, in that there are only three countries in which a vote of censure carried by an elected assembly against the government, could not bring about their resignations, and these countries, ironical as it may seem, are Spain, Russia, and last but not least, the United States of America.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Isolationist Comeback

AT THE weekend the true character of the McCarthy affair became much clearer. Senator Vandenberg's statement and Mr. Stimson's letter brought out the critical fact that the Republican opposition in Congress is now in open rebellion against the men who have led the Republican Party since Pearl Harbor.

Lippmann

Vandenberg and Stimson represent, and indeed played the leading part in forming, the bipartisan policy of national unity for war and peace. But whereas once they spoke with authority for the Republican Party, they are now on the outside appealing and protesting against the men who have captured the leadership of the party.

THE MEN who have captured the leadership of the Republican Party are the old isolationists, that hard core of irreconcilable and unreconstructed isolationists who dominated the party from the Harding Administration until Pearl Harbor. During the war and for a few years after it they deferred to the other Republicans. But now they have recovered their power. Though McCarthy himself is small potatoes, Senator Bridges and above all Senator Taft are not. In the collapse of the bipartisan policy the old isolationists have once again taken over the party.

That is why Senator Taft and Senator Bridges are not troubled by the fact that the method of the assault on Secretary Acheson, on Ambassador Jessup, and on the State Department in general is paralyzing the conduct of our foreign policy and is undermining the prestige of the United States throughout the world. In the last analysis McCarthy and the more important Republicans who are backing him do not believe in a foreign policy in which the United States plays a responsible and cooperative role in the world. They do not really care how much they injure American policy because they do not like the foreign policy which, since Pearl Harbor, they have been compelled to support. They would not regret, they would be very much pleased, to see the whole national effort of the United States in war and peace cease to be a matter of popular pride. For then their own records in war and in peace, which have been embarrassing to them, would be vindicated.

THIS isolationist comeback was not at first clearly recognizable because the leading figures in it have been so ardent for intervention in China. Moreover, some of the leading crusaders for intervention in China, notably Senator Knowland and Senator Smith of New Jersey, are not isolationists and have not meant to throw the country back into the position it was in from Harding to Pearl Harbor. But the acid test of isolationism has never been mere withdrawal within the three-mile limits. Some isolationists have been pacifists. But most of them have been men who, in any action abroad, wished to act alone and unilaterally, or not at all.

The real isolationism is a dislike of collaboration with other powers, and especially with European powers. Even Senator Taft, who is a good deal of a pacifist, was willing to use the American Navy in Formosa in an American adventure. But the formation of a common policy in Asia with the other leading and friendly Asiatic powers—notably with Britain and India—has not interested him. In fact the Republican position on China is essentially a veto on any change of American policy which would permit us to work with Britain and India, in the United Nations and elsewhere, on Asiatic problems.

IT IS NOT a debating point but the deep truth of the matter is that the isolationist campaign which began with Formosa and went on to the McCarthy business is playing straight into Russia's hands. I believe that every informed and serious observer would agree that the great objective of Soviet foreign policy is to push the United States out of Europe and Asia and back into the Western Hemisphere. Everything that happens here which renders it impossible for the United States Government to work with our allies and partners brings the Soviet government nearer to this objective.

The Republican campaign about China, though it cannot possibly restore Chiang Kai-shek, has made it impossible for this Government to take any of the necessary measures of an Asiatic policy. As long as we are entangled with Chiang and indirectly at war with Red China, we are not only in conflict with Russia, but we are divided from Britain and India and we are denied the possibility of dealing with the situation in Southeast Asia through the United Nations. It is perhaps no accident that the Harding Republicans who made the League of Nations unworkable should now be making the United Nations unworkable. The details of the story in 1950 are different from the details of the story of 1920. But the results are very similar.

THOSE who know the story of 1920 and of how the isolationists defeated Wilson will remember that the first isolationists did not begin their campaign by demanding that we withdraw from Europe. Though they ended by making a separate peace with Germany, they began with a furious assault on what they regarded as Wilson's softness in dealing with Germany. The original attack was very like the Knowland-Smith, or the MacArthur, attack on the softness of the Administration's China policy. Then as now isolationism evolved from a campaign for a super-hard policy into a general rejection of all policy—much as the immediate result of the Formosa crusade against communism was the vote in the House to refuse aid to Korea.

Then as now, it should also be noted, isolationism grew as the Wilson Administration adhered rigidly, stubbornly, and unimaginatively to its own policy. In the end the Wilsonian peace was broken down and then rejected because Wilson, who was a sick man, was too inflexible to work with his critics or to rally his supporters. Mr. Acheson would do well to ponder that experience.

'No Case' on Lattimore Hinted

the Lattimore case which I consider of some importance."

Early in the investigation of his charges, McCarthy publicly named Lattimore, a Johns Hopkins University professor and world-famed expert on the Orient, as being a "bad security risk" and having a "pro-Communist record." He identified him as a close adviser of the State Department—a matter that is in considerable dispute.

Later, just a week ago, McCarthy made the "top espionage agent" accusation to the Tydings committee in closed session. He named Lattimore as the man. He also gave the name to the press on an off-the-record basis. The name came out Sunday night, and the lid was off.

Meantime, the Associated Press had cabled Lattimore for comment. His reply, which reached here yesterday, said:

"McCarthy's off-record rantings pure moonshine. Delighted his whole case rests on me as this means he will fall flat on his face. Exactly what he said on record unknown here, so cannot reply in detail, but will be home in few days and will contact you then."

McCarthy has insisted he is willing to "stand or fall" on the Lattimore case, as a test of the validity of the rest of his charges.

The lawyers Mrs. Lattimore has engaged here, the firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter, wrote McCarthy that the charge he made is "so absurd, ridiculous and libelous that anyone who knows Mr. Lattimore or who has read his published works, that even you should know that it is a colosal lie."

Persons who know Lattimore, the letter pointed out, "bear witness to his complete loyalty and devotion to American interests."

All that is necessary to realize this, the letter continued, is to read what he has written on his specialty, the Far East.

"We assume that you did not take the trouble to read any of Mr. Lattimore's writings before you made your reckless and irresponsible charges," the lawyers said.

"If you had, you would know that Mr. Lattimore has devoted and now is devoting his great and unique store of knowledge about the Far East to an analysis of its problems for the very purpose of devising methods by which the spread of communism and Soviet influence in the Far East may be stopped. . . .

"We write this letter to you at this time to give you an opportunity publicly to retract and repudiate your charges . . . We suggest that a decent regard for the welfare of your country, for the high office that you hold, and for elementary Christian values, require you immediately to put a stop to this fantastic outrage."

The letter warned McCarthy, however, that even such a repudiation would not, as a matter of law, "exonerate you from such legal liability as you may have in the event that Mr. Lattimore chooses to bring action against you for the statements that you have made concerning him, including your 'off-the-record' identification of him as the person whom you libelously accuse of being the 'top Soviet espionage agent'."

If such a case is brought, it will apparently be on the basis that McCarthy's identification of Lattimore to the press is not covered by the immunity from suits that applies to legislators' remarks in official Congressional sessions.

The emphasis on the "damage" to the country was the major theme of Stimson's letter. It did not mention McCarthy's name; Stimson referred to him only as "the accuser."

First, he challenged McCarthy's motives. The charges he made against the State Department and the way he did it "is most emphatically not the proper way in which to insure loyalty of Government employes.

Sees 'Different Character'

"If that had been the real purpose of the accuser, he would have used the fully developed and tested procedure of the executive branch of the Government . . . The fact that the accuser has wholly ignored this well established method indicates that his interest is of a different character."

Next stimson said, the "indiscriminate accusations," having "already spattered mud upon individuals of the highest integrity," are "doubly offensive."

"They damage the innocent, and they help protect the guilty. For if the accuser is so stupid as to connect a man like Ambassador Jessup with communism, are not all such accusations made suspects?"

Next, and most important, Stimson said, the method used "dangerously impedes the conduct" of our foreign affairs. "It creates abroad a feeling that we are frightened and suspicious of each other; it diverts our attention, at home, from the genuine and pressing problems of our foreign affairs."

Finally, said Stimson, "It seems to me quite clear that the real motive of the accuser in this case is to cast discredit upon the Secretary of State . . . This man is not trying to get rid of known Communists in the State Department; he is hoping against hope that he will find some."

Stimson said that Secretary Acheson's "extraordinary record of able and disinterested public service" cannot be hurt by "these little men." But, he warned, American foreign policy is at stake in the attacks.

He concluded, "This is not time to let the noisy antics of a few upset the steady purpose of our country or distract our leaders from their proper tasks. This is rather a time for stern rebuke of such antics and outspoken support of the distinguished public servants against whom they are directed."

Four Senators were on their feet yesterday vying to insert the letter into the Congressional Record. Ives (R., N. Y.) won, and the other three, Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Lehman (D., N. Y.) and Benton (D., Conn.) joined in the general idea.

Ives and Saltonstall make the second and third Republicans who have indicated their hostility to McCarthy's campaign. Flanders (R., Vt.) was the first.

Senator Smith (R., N. J.) the other day "disassociated" himself from McCarthy's attack on Ambassador Jessup. But yesterday, he appared to have been called back into line by the group of Republicans who have been outspoken in saying they are "out to get" Secretary Acheson, and will use McCarthy's charges to do it.

For yesterday Smith defended McCarthy in a floor speech, and assailed his detractors.

The appearance of Hoover and McGrath before the Tydings committee yesterday afternoon packed the Senate caucus room with its largest crowd of spectators so far in this investigation.

But their testimony was almost as expected. McGrath cited a long list of precedents, beginning with President Washington, against making available executive branch documents to Congress.

Both he and Hoover argued at length that unsupportable damage would be done to the FBI if its files were disclosed. Its informants must be kept confidential, Hoover said, or its ability to perform investigations would be ruined.

Furthermore, he explained, the files do not contain only proved information. Much undigested raw material must remain in them. If this were disclosed or misinterpreted, it would damage or destroy innocent people.

Most important, Hoover said, disclosure would reveal 'confidential procedures and techniques." If these, and other information in the files "of a highly restricted nature having a direct bearing on national security," leaked out, it would be of "considerable value to a foreign power."

Precedent "Plague" Feared

To repeated demands by Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) on why summaries of the files could not be given the commitee, with strict assurance of no wider disclosure, Hoover and McGrath replied only that a vital principle was at stake. Any such action would set a precedent that would "plague" the Justice Department for ever after.

"The floodgates would be opened," Hoover said.

Senator Lodge (Mass.), the other Republican on the Tydings committee, made one of his rare appearances at yesterday afternoon's hearings. His enthusiasm for the McCarthy campaign has been somewhat less than burning.

Diffidently, he pointed out that FBI files on nominees for Federal judgeships are made available to the Senate Judiciary Committee. McGrath and Hoover argued that the case was not parallel to the FBI loyalty files.

The clear indication that the committee will not get the files McCarthy has been demanding gave rise in some quarters to the thought that the investigation may be dropped soon. There seems to be no source material the committee can investigate.

It can only hear more of McCarthy's charges, if he has any, and listen to the replies of persons accused.

It will hear Haldore Hanson, State Department official named two weeks ago by McCarthy, Wednesday morning. Tydings set April 4 as a tentative date for hearing Lattimore, who expects to be back in this country by then.

JOHN S. SERVICE, veteran State Department official, returned to Washington yesterday to answer charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) that he is pro-Communist. Service, who was recalled en route to an assignment in India, previously denied the charges. Arriving at National Airport, he had "no comment" for reporters

'Master Spy' Hunt Urged

Conn.), a former Assistant Secretary of State, told Bridges he was as anxious as anyone to clear "this miasma" and "suspicion" of the State Department, but suggested "we attempt to rise above politics to statesmanship."

In an earlier speech Senator H. Alexander Smith (D., N. J.) said McCarthy was "rendering a patriotic service" but suggested that further hearings on his charges be held behind closed doors. Said Smith: "Under no conditions must we let partisan politics enter into our deliberations on these problems."

Bridges said he had no personal quarrel with Secretary Acheson, but recalled that he was one of the six Senators who voted against his confirmation.

"It would be hard to get a corporal's guard to vote for him today," he told the Senate.

Leads With Two Cases

He led off with the cases of former State Department officials Alger Hiss and Henry Julian Wadleight and demanded the Tydings subcommittee find out "who put them in our State Department?" Hiss has been convicted on prejury charges stemming from his denial that he was a Communist spy. Wadleigh has admitted giving information to a Communist agent.

"Did Hiss and Wadleigh go it alone?" asked Bridges. "Were they the sole architects of .his disaster? . . . Stalin is not a superman. He has help from inside our ranks."

He said the American people were "rightly alarmed" that "confessed and proved spies" had held policy-making posts in the department and that 91 homosexuals had recently been fired.

Bridges charged homosexuals and subversive agents were put in the department "because Russia wanted them there."

Bridges insisted throughout that he was asking questions rather than making charges.

He said the subcommittee should go into these questions, among others:

"Who put the 91 homosexuals in our State Department?"

"Who is responsible for the decision to abandon China?"

"Who in the State Department is responsible for the freedom afforded to Valentin A. Gubitchev?"

"Who persuaded Joseph E. Davies to write 'Mission to Moscow?' . . . Who used our Ambassador as a foil?"

"Who decided Formosa has no strategic importance?"

"If we can get those answers," said Bridges, "we have already begun to win the cold war."

Democratic Leaders Reply

Democratic leaders on both sides of the Capitol meanwhile spoke up in Acheson's defense.

House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) said he was shocked at the Republican campaign against Acheson. McCormack said he feared the attack might bring "harmful results . . . not to any political party but to our country."

Acting Senate Democratic Leader Francis J. Myers (Pa.), said the Tydings subcommittee has failed to turn up "one shred of evidence to prove or substantiate McCarthy's political charges."

On the contrary, he told the Senate, the evidence thus far "demonstrates that we have every right to place confidence in the loyalty of those carrying out our foreign policy."

He compared McCarthy's charges to "the smear campaigns which have cropped up in election years in the past."

"You may be sure that the investigation will leave no stone unturned," Myers said. "If there are Communists, or Communist sympathizers, in the department, they will be exposed."

Says 'Voice' Is Undercut

Kefauver told the Senate the McCarthy charges have "undercut" the "voice of America" and raised a "cloud of suspicions among the peoples of the North Atlantic States, whose cooperation we must have.

Kefauver closed with a plea to the Senate to "get back to a bipartisan foreign policy, which is so necessary in this time of stress."

Opening the day's debate of the McCarthy charges, Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) similarly accused Republicans of destroying the bipartisan foreign policy and endangering world peace.

Lehman called the GOP attack a device for bringing our foreign policy into discredit and thereby providing the Republican party with an issue in the 1950 campaign.

PROOF of its healing power

The way to health, harmony, and peace among men is earnestly and unselfishly sought by both science and religion.

Many divergent methods confront mankind. But the claims of all ultimately submit to one test — the test of proof, the test of demonstration.

SCIENCE and HEALTH with Key to the Scriptures
by Mary Baker Eddy

consists of one hundred pages of unsolicited testimonies from men and women in all walks of life. In simple language they tell of the healing and freedom which came to them from the thoughtful reading of this book alone.

All these testimonies have been carefully authenticated. All manner of disease and discord has been cast out, permanently and promptly, through devoted study of this great book.

This is the living proof that Christian Science provides of its healing power.

British Bar Seretse From His Capital

Gaberones, Bechuanaland, March 27 (U.P.).—The British today barred Seretse Khama's return to Serowe, capital of the Bamangwato reserve, and a tribal spokesman warned again there may be violence among the 100,000 natives.

Dispatches from Serowe said protectorate authorities had ordered exclusion papers served on the young Oxford-educated chief as soon as he lands. The documents bar his return to the reservation without permission and threaten him with imprisonment if he defies them.

Seretse is now in Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, on his way home from Britain where the Colonial Office told him he is to be banished into exile for five years for marrying a white girl.

Seretse and his "white queen" are to leave Bechuanaland in June, after their baby is born.

Peto Sekgoma, Seretse's uncle, and other head men of the Bamangwato were gathered here to greet him and warn him of the tribal unrest.

"I say very definitely there will be trouble in Serowe unless Seretse is allowed to return here," Sekgoma said.

"We will extend our non-cooperation policy—we stopped paying the British taxes a week ago—and we cannot guarantee there won't be an outbreak of violence.

"I and the other head men have urged the tribe not to resort to violence, but the temper of the tribe is not too good."

DeOrsey Disposes of Stock, Resigns From Redskins

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CLEARWATER, FLA., March 27.—The other day, Dick Sisler sidled up to Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phillies and suggested softly, "Why don't I forget about first base and try the outfield?" He got the nod, and the Eddie Waitkus story entered into a new episode.

Waitkus is the Phils' good first baseman who was shot up by a fool girl in the team's Chicago hotel last June, and there was grave doubt that he would live, even more doubt he'd play ball again. The Phils hastily installed Sisler at first base and finished third. Sisler's loaded bat offset his fielding deficiencies.

POVICH

When Manager Sawyer hit camp with his squad on March 1, he made a statement seemingly devoid of all sympathy for Waitkus who since November had been in Clearwater trying to recover his health. "Waitkus will have to beat out Sisler for the job," said Sawyer.

But Sawyer revealed later that it was a deliberately unsympathetic announcement. He said he didn't want to coddle Waitkus. "He'll bounce back quicker and get more satisfaction out of winning his job back if we make him think he has to fight for it," he said. That is what has been happening. In fact it has already happened.

THE FIRST TIME Waitkus went to bat in an intra-squad game, Sisler was playing first base. Waitkus almost tore his rival's head off with a fierce line drive. Ordinarily, Eddie is not a pull hitter, but this time he was pulling at a target—the fellow who was out for his job.

Sisler never could carry Waitkus' glove as a first baseman, a healthy Waitkus that is. But there was no gainsaying Sisler's power at bat, and even his first-basing improved last summer. But never was a man who had done an adequate job so thoroughly eclipsed in a battle for a position as Sisler has been this spring. Waitkus shows no traces of his wound except a patched up hole in his back where they went in and got the bullet.

The Phils, one of the rich clubs, sent a special trainer to Clearwater, along with Waitkus in November to supervise his training. He spent 30 minutes in the water astride a paddle board each day to strengthen his back.

He ran for an hour on the beach. The townsfolk adopted him, openly rooted for his comeback. They gave him an apartment, offered him a car and chauffeur which he didn't accept.

WHEN SOME CLUBS complained to Commissioner Chandler that the Yankees and Cubs were beating the March 1 training start, he made them cease and desist. But Waitkus was neatly taken in when he was shot.

Suspicion might have attached to the circumstances had it been another ball player who entered a girl's hotel room after midnight. But Waitkus, a handsome young bachelor, was well known for his circumspect attitudes. He checked with the desk clerk before he called the girl who had left a message that she must see him in her room.

"She was shrewd," said Eddie. "She had registered from my home town of Cambridge, Mass., and not only that—she gave her address as my old street. I presumed she was a friend of my folks. She never lived in Cambridge. I guess it takes crazy people to think up things like that."

WAITKUS THOUGHT it was a gag when, on entering the room, the girl confronted him with a paring knife. He laughed and sat down. When she pulled a .22 rifle from the closet, he made for a window, turned to face her again and was riddled through the chest. A few days later as he lay in the hospital, a priest administered the last rites.

For four months, Waitkus was a human irrigation project with two one-foot tubes protruding from his back while doctors battled to keep the wound from healing on the outside before it could be properly treated on the inside.

He went from 175 to 145 pounds. A machine gunner during the war, Waitkus' first reactions when he heard the rifle explode was that it was the Japs once more. "Do I have to go through this again," he wondered.

If Waitkus has any fear now that he won't be able to resume his place as the National League's best first baseman, it isn't physicial. His next big test is psychic. He may not be keen about facing those mobs of bobby soxers who infest the Chicago Cubs' park and pester the good-looking ball players.

He'd like to keep away from any morbid sensational-seekers with ideas. He wants no more purple hearts.

Wismer Gets Holdings and Is Appointed A Director

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The Washington Redskins announced yesterday that Leo DeOrsey, outspoken minority stockholder, has resigned as a director of the local professional football team and disposed of his holdings.

The announcement also said that Harry Wismer, sports director of the American Broadcasting Co. and announcer of Redskin games for years, has acquired DeOrsey's stock and been appointed a member of the board.

DeOrsey, the announcement said, withdrew from the Redskins in order to devote all of his time to his legal practice.

DeOrsey, prominent tax attorney here, said last fall he paid $27,500 for his interest in the club in 1946. He also said then that he estimated its worth at $75,000. Last night he declined to reveal his selling figure.

Both Non-Committal

Both DeOrsey and Wismer were somewhat non-committal last night and there was a distinct air of surprise about the announcement.

Reached in New York, DeOrsey said: "The Wismer angle is new to me."

The team's severest critic last season added: "George Marshall and I are good friends and always will be."

Wismer was reached in Detroit, his home.

"Swell," he said on learning that the Redskins had formally announced his appointment as a director.

"I'm particularly happy about this because of my long association with the Redskins. It's nice to officially be a member of the family."

Wismer said "no comment" when asked what amount he had paid for DeOrsey's stock.

Wismer will continue to broadcast Redskin games.

There was a report last fall that DeOrsey made an attempt to buy out President George Marshall. DeOrsey demanded changes in the team leadership and was instrumental in the ouster of Head Coach John E. (Billick) Whelchel.

Represents Big Names

Highly critical of the team's poor performance, DeOrsey said he had nothing against Whelchel personally. Primarily, he said he thought it unsound that Whelchel had no voice in choosing his own assistants when he succeeded Turk Edwards.

At that time, he said, "I am vitally interested financially and in that respect I'm anxious for the Redskins to be a team people will come out to see. Right now they aren't."

If he concentrates on his private law business, DeOrsey will have enough to do. As a tax attorney, he represents key theatrical and sports figures including Arthur Godfrey, Dorothy Lamour, Notre Dame's Frank Leahy and Ted Williams.

Wismer, effervescent "voice of the Redskins," is one of the country's top sports announcers. Wismer, 37, is married to a niece of the late Henry Ford.

In addition to broadcasting Redskin games, many of the country's college football contests, and serving as sports director of ABC, Wismer is manager of Station WJR in Detroit.

'Just Fed Up'

Club-Breaking Golfer Has Nothing On Bowler Who Quits With a Splash

Milkaukee, March 27 (AP).—Remember the golfer who missed a putt and broke his clubs?

Or the baseball player who took a third strike and tossed his bat in the air?

Well, now meet the bowler who got disgusted and dropped his pet ball in the river.

He's Bill Starcevich, a bowler for 12 years, who dropped his ball, shoes and other equipment into the Menominee River last night.

He was just fed up, Starcevich explained, with "bumping my head into a brick wall for 12 years."

"I feel as if a terrible load was off my mind now," he added.

He said his average had been in the low 170s.

Noren, Coan Homer

Nats Start Fast, Finish Last to Phillies, 13-8

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Clearwater, Fla., March 27.—The wind blew a gale today and the Nats a ball game after hopping into a 4-0 lead against the Phillies in the first inning. The final score was eventually computed at 13-8, after all the extra-base hits had settled.

Both clubs had the wind with 'em, and home runs by Bill Nicholson and Dick Sisler of the Phils, and Gil Coan and Irv Noren of the Nats sailed out of the park. Among the items that stayed in the park too long were Bucky Harris' three rookie pitchers, Dick Welteroth, Jim Pearce and Buzz Dozier, they held the Phils to 17 hits.

The day was a hitters' paradise, with the young gale inviting everything hit into the air to leave the park via the right- and center-field fences. Coan sandwiched his homer between a pair of triples socked in his first and third times at bat.

The Nats' four-run lead lasted no longer than it took the Phils to get to bat. They had a seven-run answer for the Nats before Dick Welteroth could get three Phils out.

An old pal, Milo Candini, relieved Bill Koszarek at the end of three innings, and held the Nats to one run and two hits for three innings. Jim Konstanty gave 'em their last two runs, in the ninth.

Coan's triple to center started the Nats off and against Koszarek and a bit later he walked two in a row. Eddie Robinson, Ed Stewart and Al Kozar packed singles into the inning to get three more runs home after Coan scored on a passed ball.

Welteroth was relieved at the end of one inning into which he packed four innings work. He faced 12 batters in that Phils' first. Five of 'em got hits, including doubles by Hamner and Waitkus and a triple by Sisler. He set up their last three runs by making a wild throw to the plate with the bases full and an easy force-play in sight.

Sherry Robertson tripled in a pinch-hitting role for Welteroth in the second, and Coan produced his homer at that point to narrow the Phils' lead to 7-6. But the Nats never got that close again.

Against big Jim Pearce, Bill Nicholson led off with his second consecutive pinch-hit homer in the third inning, and the Phils upped their margin to 9-6.

The Nats raised a mild threat to wipe out the Phils' entire seven-run lead in their own ninth when Noren led off with a long homer over the center field wall, his first in a Washington uniform.

Robertson doubled and Stewart singled before anybody was out, but Konstanty called a dead halt. He fanned Yost and Kozar and got rid of Grasso with ease.

IN SHORT . . . The Phillies have admitted an outfield crisis by taking on 35-year-old Chet Laabs, released by Toronto . . . Bobo Newsom is drawing ever close to a job with the Nats, if today's type of Washington pitching continues . . . Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phils says Milo Candini won't be used as a relief pitcher, a talent it took Washington managers four years to discover he lacked. Candini will start for the Phillies . . . Pinch-hitting is apparently the Nats' best talent. In the last three games, Pinch-hitters Gil Coan and Clyde Vollmer belted homers and Sherry Robertson banged a triple . . . On the bases today, the Nats were lax. Sam Dente was picked off first, and Irv Noren off second . . . The Nats' Grapefruit League record now stands at six wins seven defeats. But two of their victories were against their Chattanooga farm hands . . . Bucky Harris took his team back to Orlando after the game for a brush with Birmingham of the Southern Association tomorrow. Sid Hudson will pitch.

Keene Wins Split Verdict Over Lofton

Julian Keene punched out a split 10-round decision over Sipio Lofton, of Baltimore in a bloody, wild-swinging light heavyweight feature at Turner's Arena last night.

Lofton, who previously had defeated two Washington scrappers, was dropped for a count of nine in the first round and was bleeding from both eyes when the bout ended.

Lofton rallied in the eighth round and dropped Keene with a left to the stomach but Referee Marty Gallagher ruled it a low blow and took the round away. Lofton also lost the ninth because of low punches. Gallagher voted for a draw but both judges decided the fight in favor of Keene who weighed 169 to Lofton's 171½.

Young Eddie Gilchrist, who won the local and national amateur bantamweight championships last summer, made an impressive debut in the pro ranks in a five-round semi-final.

Gilchrist defeated Lou Yonkers, tough little veteran from Roanoke, Va. Gilchrist took complete command, shook him with hard rights and left Yonkers' face badly marked.

In another five-rounder, Ralph Brown of Washington, 146, scored a split decision over Roy Wirt, another Roanoke scrapper. In the other preliminaries, Lee Davis, local middleweight, knocked out Jimmy Elliott in 1:52 of the first round; Frank Ball, 136, tko'd Lucky Fitzgerald, Roanoke, in 2:29 of the third, and Angelo Marine took a four-round decision from Jimmy O'Brien, Baltimore middleweight.

Cards Beat Out Yanks; Collins Socks Homer

St. Petersburg, March 27 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals, scoring three runs off Tommy Byrne in the sixth, three more off Don Johnson in the seventh and then staving off two late inning rallies by the Yankees defeated the New Yorkers today, 8-7.

The Yanks scored four in the eighth with the help of a three-run homer by Joe Collins. Harry Brecheen held the Yanks to a lone marker in the first four innings.

Fort Meade Wins Over Dartmouth

Fort Meade's baseball team registered a 6-4 triumph over Dartmouth in the opener for both teams yesterday on the winners' field.

John Stoehr's two-run double in the eighth inning broke a 3-3 tie and sewed up the game for Fort Meade.

Safford-Chandler, CYO Win D. C. Semifinals

Safford-Chandler and CYO won last night's semifinal games in the D. C. Recreation basketball tourney at Roosevelt High School.

CYO eliminated Gas Company, 46-22, with Chris Pavich high scorer with 14 points; Andy Cranford's 11 points led Safford-Chandler to its 47-35 victory over Bethesda Merchants.

University Park Wins

University Park defeated Mt. Rainier, 37-34, for the senior championship of the Prince Georges County Boys Club tourney last night at College Park. Harry Moul paced the winners with 13 points.

Wally Robb Dies at 69, Sporting Goods Official

Chicago, March 27 (AP).—W. L. (Wally) Robb, 69, affiliated with Wilson sporting goods company for 32 years, died of a heart attack at St. Joseph's Hospital early today.

Robb, a native of Ontario, Calif., was athletic promotion director and assistant to Wilson President L. B. Icely. He started as an athlete at Pomona (Calif.) Junior College

Charles' Fight Is Called Off

Buffalo, N. Y., March 27 (AP)—The off-again-on-again NBA heavyweight title fight between Titlist Ezzard Charles and Challenger Freddie Beshore finally hit the rocks for keeps tonight.

The New York State Athletic Commission said the bout, scheduled for Wednesday night, was "postponed indefinitely."

But Promoter Dewey Michaels of the Fairview Athletic Club said it was cancelled.

Charles, the commission said, will be able to fight in two months. But apparently Michaels no longer is interested.

The commission issued this statement:

"The contest between Ezzard Charles and Freddie Beshore has been postponed indefinitely because of an injury Charles suffered in training a month ago. Competent special tests made here (in New York) today show that the rib injury bruised a heart muscle."

Indians Whip Pirates, 3-1

San Bernardino, Calif., March 27 (AP).—Jesse Flores and Dick Rozek pitched two-hit ball to give the Cleveland Indians a 3-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in an exhibition game today.

Flores tossed six innings marred only by one single which Tom Saffell beat out in the fourth. The hit off Rozek was a double by Pete Castiglione in the eighth. He scored later on two outfield flies.

Braves Win

Tigers Get 16 Runs, Lose by 2

Bradenton, Fla., March 27 (AP).—Rookie Boston Braves first sacker Hank Ertman clubbed a bases-loaded double in the last of the eighth today, scoring the necessary runs for a weird 18-16 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Ertman's smash broke off the outstretched glove of right fielder Vic Wertz and allowed three runs to score, giving Ertman a total of five runs batted in during the three hour and five minute exhibition.

CCNY Seeks Second National Title Tonight Against Bradley

New York, March 27 (AP).—The scene is the same and so is the cast of characters but a tired, vindictive Bradley will attempt to rewrite the finish when it plays City College of New York tomorrow night for the NCAA basketball championship.

Tomorrow night's battle in Madison Square Garden will decide:

1. Whether Bradley or City College of New York has the country's best team.

2. Whether CCNY is great enough to win two national titles in the same year.

It's a rematch (10:15 p. m. EST) of the two teams that played in the exciting National invitation tournament final here nine days ago. CCNY'S rampaging sophomores, riding a late season surge, upset favored Bradley in that one, 69-61.

Since then City College has won the Eastern — 78-73 over North Carolina State—and Bradley the Western NCAA title—68-66 over Baylor.

This time the oddsmakers pick CCNY to repeat. They favor the Beavers by a slim 1½ points.

No team ever has won both the National Invitation Tournament and the National Collegiate AA crowns in one season.

In the curtain raiser (8:15 P. M. EST) North Carolina State is favored over Baylor.

Highs Open Golf Season

Six matches today open the local scholastic golf season.

There are two Interhigh matches. Wilson against Central at Manor Country Club and Western against Roosevelt at Prince Georges.

Home-Bred Wins After Five Losses

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., March 7.—Manchac, who must have felt lazy under the Florida sun having been out of the money five times, found himself in his native Maryland today.

The 6-year-old was a ball of fire as far as energy goes for he developed a stretch rush that carried him to a head photo decision over John E. Hughes' Vital Sun.

Third money in the test, designated as the Monument Purse, went to R. E. Carter's Oriole which coupled with Snowflakes, was installed the favorite by a crowd of 9328.

Racing in the colors of Samuel Adelson, Manchac was fairly well supported and returned an 8.20 win mutuel. The son of Bahram, a cast-off from the Labrot Stable of Annapolis, Md., was clocked in 1:11 1/5 for the 6 furlongs over a fast track. That was two-fifths off the track record of 1:10 4/5 held by Star Porter.

Bobbie Strange, who chews the largest tobacco cud in the jocks' room, did the riding and turned in a stellar performance, making full use of Manchac's punch and courage in the final drive.

Last Won at Pimlico

Although he registered his first 1950 victory, Manchac is no stranger to the winner's circle. He won five races last year and gathered $18,437 in purse money. His last success came at the 1949 Pimlico meeting when he bounded home at 25-1.

The absence of a "consolation" daily double pay-off was in evidence today for the umpteenth time in Maryland. In the second race, Little Ville was ordered scratched by the race vet after the horses reached the post. Under Maryland rules, those who had the winner of the first race hooked up with Little Ville got their money back.

In most States, holders of tickets on the first race winner, going to a scratched horse, would have gotten an amount, figured on a pro rata basis close to the mutuel price on the first winner.

Fortunately Larry (ex-baseball) MacPhail's B Battery won the first race and paid only $6. However, the same "money back only" rule would have applied if the colt had returned an individual mutuel of $160.

Morris Sollenberger's Royal Bones won the second race as a $16.20 shot. Holders of the 1-and-12 daily double tickets received $163.60 or one dollar less than before the scratching of Little Ville.

In the last five years, I have called the attention of racing commission members to "the consolation" rule repeatedly. Everybody has been in favor of it but, like the weather, nobody does anything about it.

Dear Folks—

At Laurel There's an apprentice Jockey here named Robert Barrett. Somebody remarked, "You'd think Major Barrett would be too busy with the Washington Police Force to be out here riding in the afternoon." Magnet, winner of last Saturday's Capitol Handicap, is eligible for the Harford, Philadelphia and Burke Handicaps at the 'Graw. Jockey Ronnie Nash was fined $100 for foul riding aboard Walter Halter on Saturday's card. Leave it to the race trackers to give appropriate nicknames. The handy man around the racing secretary's office is an avid churchgoer and he's known from coast to coast as "Steeple." It wasn't a factor in his getting the job, but Bill Corum, head man at the Kentucky Derby, picked the result one, two, three, four last year. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Life Begins at 60

The Fishing Ritchies

By Ralph Murdock

FOLKS, let us tell you about the "Fishing Ritchies." They are Charles T. Ritchie, age 83, and his wife Orie, who is 72 years young. Their formula is "Life begins at 60." They are fresh water anglers from the word "go." Rarely do they indulge in salt water fishing.

These grand people, whom we had the pleasure of meeting in Florida, have been vacationing at the Indian River Hotel at Rockledge, Fla., since January 19. It's their seventh straight vacation at this resort. Husband Ritchie sums it up thusly: "We thoroughly enjoy the bass fishing at Lake Poinsett and the golf course at the Cocoa Town and Country Club."

These fishing pals give the bass a workout every other day and seldom fail to bring home a big catch. We saw two of their catches, one of six bass and the other a string of eight largemonths. Mrs. Ritchie proudly remarked: "That big one, the 5½-pounder, I caught. He was really a scrapper. Come July 17, we will be married 54 years."

The remarkable feature of the Ritchies is the fact that they both enjoy the same hobbies. In addition to being expert bait casters, both are better than average golfers. Charles Ritchie still shoots golf in the upper 80s. Charles simply has no dull moments even while on vacation.

His wife Orie was also doing real well on the greens until last year when she was forced to give up the sport due to a vertebra ailment. When a fishing guide is not available at their favorite angling spot, they operate their own fishing craft. They have the know-how for locating bass. To this we add—continued tight lines for a grand couple, the "Fishing Ritchies."

Rutgers Wins Over Terps In Opener

Herm Hering pitched and batted Rutgers University to a 10-0 opening victory over Maryland yesterday at College Park.

Maryland plays host to the victors again today.

The slim right-hander held the Terps to three scattered hits while collecting a like number himself. He batted in two runs and scored three on two singles and a double.

Rutgers, coached by former Nat George Case, put together two doubles, a single and two walks off Bucky Loomis in the third inning for its first four runs.

3-Man Commission Seen in Sothoron Act

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter
Last of a Series

It's going to be quite a while before Prince Georgeans can decide whether the Sothoron Act is an end or a beginning.

T. Hammond Welsh, sr., one of the county's present commissioners, believes that it can be a beginning of a new form of government in the county. He believes that by expanding on terms of the Sothoron Act, Prince Georges might eventually get around to a three-man commissioner form of government.

Welsh believes that once the Sothoron Act is put into operation, the county will find the full-time commissioner has too much to do. He believes that out of this situation may evolve a system of three commissioners, each of whom will become "expert" on some phase of county government and advise the other commissioners on needs and operation of that phase.

Briscoe's Job Affected

The other commissioners are unanimously in favor of the Sothoron Act, but inclined to "wait and see" how it works before committing themselves on its evolution.

One person certain to be affected by the Act is Linden Briscoe, the clerk to the commissioners. Ask anybody familiar with fected by the act is Linden Briscoe. They will tell you he "runs" Prince Georges County from his position as clerk to the board.

He draws funds for the county's administration on warrants from the treasurer. He is the county's fiscal officer; its purchasing agent. He arranges the agenda for the commissioners' meetings. Minutes of those meetings are prepared under his supervision. During the meetings, he makes suggestions on how the commissioners should act.

New Departments Probable

Obviously, some of these functions are going to be taken over by the new full-time commissioner. The Sothoron Act gives the commissioners the right to "establish departments of the county government, and prescribe their functions."

It is quite probable that a department for purchasing, and a fiscal department will be set up separately under the new law.

As now constituted, the commissioners' actions are reported in minutes, as orders. There is no official record of any debates before actions, nor any official record of discussions where actions are not taken.

For an historian, this record would seem woefully inadequate. A sample from the minutes of the December 20, 1949, meeting:

"Ordered, that the board approve the recommendation of the Board of Directors of the Prince Georges General Hospital to go on a 5½-day week, and also to employ additional employes at an approximate cost of $1782 per month, effective as of January 1, 1950."

The meetings are not meetings "of record" and there is no verbatim transcript in existence of the debates or discussions which the commissioners have.

Further, there is no subject file, specifically, for actions taken in relation to the police department, for instance, or to any other department of county government.

In effect, the county residents don't know what goes on at the meetings unless the newspapers report each action.

Two provisions of the Sothoron Act may affect this situation.

One, the section providing for "rules of procedure for the conduct of" board meetings, would give the commissioners at least the right to call for fuller minutes of their meetings; would give them the right also to publish agendas of their expected topics for discussion and action before the meetings.

Another section, requiring publication of effective ordinances of the commissioners in two places in the county, will give the citizens a chance to know "what goes on" without having to go to Upper Marlboro Courthouse and (a) attend the session; (b) go through each meeting's minutes.

Police Chief Ralph W. Brown is another man upon whom the Sothoron Act may have a strong effect.

Brown has been crying for years over the inadequacy of his police force. He doesn't know how many additional men he will get, right off, when the county commissioners have the power to "provide for a county police force."

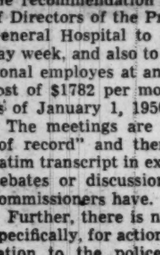
He hopes to get "at least " 20 as a starter. With 180,000 people in the county, Brown thinks the ideal police force would be one man per thousand residents. But he doesn't think he will get anywhere near that figure within the foreseeable future.

It is still too soon even for conjecture on the provisions of the bill which outline a system of budgetary control and audit.

In a year or two, Prince Georgeans will start finding out whether they have bought themselves a healthy or a sick "pig in a poke."

Appointment Of Junior High Head Expected

Arlington School Superintendent William A. Early is expected to recommend Claude M. Richmond for principal of the new Stratford Junior High School at a meeting of the county school board tonight.



Richmond

Richmond has been Washington-Lee High School principal for the past 13 years. The board is expected to accept the superintendent's recommendation.

The new school, built at a cost of about $1,500,000 to accommodate 1000 students, is expected to be ready for occupancy next fall. It is located at N. Military rd. and Vacation la.

Early pointed out yesterday that the principal should be appointed immediately, since 46 teachers will be assigned at Stratford next year, most of them new in the county school system. The new principal will assist in interviewing these faculty members, who will include six physical education teachers, three home economics instructors, a librarian guidance director, art and music teachers as well as instructors in standard school subjects.

Richmond came to W-L High School 22 years ago. He has a B.S. from William and Mary and a master's degree from George Washington University. He taught at Farnham, Va., for four years before coming to Arlington. He was named W-L principal in 1937. He lives at 3108 5th st. N., in Arlington.

Sanitary Commission to Study Proposal to Put Fluorine in Suburban Water Supply to Cut Dental Decay

At the request of the Southern Maryland Dental Society, the Washingon Surburban Sanitary Commission will begin today consideration of a proposal to put fluorine in the suburban water supply to cut down dental decay.

Laboratory tests have shown that water containing one part per million of fluorine is beneficial in preventing tooth decay, the dental group declared. Two weeks ago it asked the Sanitary Commission to undertake the program in the Washington area.

Since that request was made, it has been backed by the Montgomery County Medical Society, Prince Georges County Medical Society, and Maryland State Board of Health, according to Arley Unger of the Sanitary Commission.

Unger said the commission had been waiting for reports of the medical societies and the health board before formal consideration of the Dental Society request. He said the commission will take the question up formally at its meeting at 2 p. m. today at Hyattsville, but probably will not complete action on it. The Dental Society estimated the cost of the project as 10 cents per person per year for those served.

Budget Director Pace Seen as Successor to Army Secretary Gray

Frank Pace, director of the Budget Bureau, is a good bet to be appointed Army Secretary to succeed Gordon Gray, a top official said yesterday:

"The job has been offered to Frank; we believe he'll take it."

Gray plans to leave in June to become president of the University of North Carolina. He has asked the President to name his successor soon so he can break him in.

If Pace transfers to the Army, Frederick J. Lawton would be moved up to Budget Director, and Elmen B. Staats would be promoted to Lawton's No. 2 job as Assistant Director. Both Lawton and Staats are career civil servants. Lawton took leave from the Budget Bureau two years ago to be an administrative assistant to President Truman.

Pace, a great favorite of the President's, is widely regarded as one of the outstanding young men in Government. He recently rejected an offer to take over one of the most successful law firms in Arkansas to remain in Government service.

RETIREMENT: Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) and several of his colleagues on the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, are now working on a plan to liberalize the retirement system for laid-off employes.

The staff working on the bill is preparing one along these lines: full annuity at 55 for those employes who are laid off with 25 or more years of service, and a discounted annuity for employes who are 50 and who are victims of a reduction in force after 20 or more years of service.

A laid-off employe who is 55 may now get an immediate annuity if he has had 25 or more years of service but the pension is discounted for every year he's under 60.

NOTES: AFL's Government Employes Council has joined the campaign to bring about the defeat of Reorganization Plan 18 which would transfer Federal buildings from the Postoffice to General Services. It, too, fears pay cuts for the building employes . . . Walter Reed Hospital has openings for GS-3 stenographers, $2650 salary. Civil Service status not necessary. Contact Guy W. Bennett, personnel chief . . . Securities & Exchange Commission has given cash awards for economy suggestions to George E. Reynolds and D. J. DeFrancis. Also, suggestion certificates to James F. Ward, Robert S. Wood, and James Hindle . . . The House has voted funds to hire 10 more Capitol phone operators.

FCC: The Federal Communications Commission, now being reorganized on a functional basis, has made these following appointments effective April 3:

In the new Common Carrier Bureau, Jack Werner, assistant chief; Marion H. Woodward, chief, international division; John R. Lambert, chief, telegraph division; Curtis M. Bushnell, chief, telephone division; Charles R. Makela, chief, field coordination unit, and Alexander Ueland, chief, statistical division. In the office of Chief Accountant: Hugo Reyer, assistant chief; John J. Nordberg, chief, accounting systems division, and Hyman H. Goldin, chief, economics division.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service is accepting applications for: lithographic offset pressman, $1.02 to $2.19 an hour; offset duplicating press operator and helper, $1.02 to $1.66; unit supervisor, $1.37 to $1.93; printing and bindery operative, $1.02 to $1.77 . . . Coming up in April are examinations for all branches of engineering at $4600 to $6400 salaries . . . War service and temporary employes in patent advisor jobs must be laid off by May 31. Civil Service orders . . . At the Naval Gun Factory, a test is open for paver, $11.84 to $12.80 a day.

DOWNWARD: Federal employment is now down to the lowest point since March, 1942. The total counted by Civil Service as of March 1 was 1,949,600, a decline of 800 from the previous month. In contrast, employment here increased 300 during February. Postoffice reported the largest increase; Federal Security the largest reduction. On a national scale, Army and Navy continued to decline while Internal Revenue reported the largest increase.

Striner Lays Tax Ills to Poor Help And Bad Health

Ex-D. C. Pharmacist Never Knew Income, He Tells Court as Evasion Trial Opens

Baltimore, Md., March 27 (Spl.).—Inadequate help and poor health today were cited as the reasons why Benjamin Striner, 41-year-old Washington civic and business leader, never really knew how much he was earning at his pharmacy.

Striner's trial on attempted income-tax evasion charges opened here before Chief Judge William C. Coleman in Federal court. The ex-pharmacist and investor in commercial real estate is accused of attempting to evade $59,552.89 in taxes for the years 1942, 1943, 1944, and 1945.

Striner is president of the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations, former president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations of Washington, and former president and member of the executive committee of the District Pharmaceutical Association.

Increased to $189,000

Norman P. Ramsey, assistant United States Attorney, declared in an opening statement to the jury that Striner's net worth increased from $60,000 at the end of 1941 to $189,000 at the end of 1945.

The trial is expected to run through Wednesday.

Hilary Gans, defense counsel, told the jury that Striner admits he owed more taxes than he reported on his tax returns. But declared there was no evidence of a willful attempt to evade the taxes.

Gans said after Striner learned that tax agents were investigating his income, the taxpayer immediately employed a private accountant to go over his records and subsequently paid about $80,000 in taxes, found to be due.

The defense contended the pressure of business and the failure of Striner to take inventory of his stock at the pharmacy once operated in the 2900 block of Nichols ave. se., caused the defendant to report gross receipts of about $75,000 from the business when they probably were almost double that amount.

Sold Store in 1944

Striner, who is married and the father of two children, now lives at 7800 Orchid st. nw. He retired from the pharmacy business in September, 1944, when he sold the drug store for $45,000, the jury was told.

In 1939, the prosecutor said, Striner became interested in commercial real estate and purchased the building in which his pharmacy was located. The building included three stores and three apartments, Ramsey said.

During 1943 and 1944, Striner broadened his real estate investments and acquired interests in apartment houses, shopping stores and warehouses, it was disclosed.

In the four tax years Striner reported net earnings of about $6500 a year. The total understatement of net income for the four-year period was $112,856, the Government charged.

In an effort to prove that Striner was not aware of his profits from the pharmacy, Gans pointed out that he sold the business for $45,000.

Toting Bottles

3 Overloaded Suspects Held In Robbery

Three men were arrested early yesterday in the vicinity of 17th and I sts. nw. after police noted whisky bottles bulging out of their pockets.

They were charged with burglarizing a nearby liquor store.

Police Pvt. Walter T. Behe, saw one man emerge from an alley, his pockets bulging with bottles. Questioning drew an admission that the man and two others had just broken into Monaghan & Randel's, Inc., liquor store, 1708 I st. nw.

Behe enlisted aid of radio-equipped cabs and drivers nearby to summon police help, and held the prisoner, identified as William W. Holmes, 44, of 1418 W st. nw.

While the cab drivers held Holmes, Behe found a rear window in the store broken, but no one inside. A scout car arrived and began cruising the neighborhood.

At 17th and K sts., the scout car men arrested Sylvester L. Thomas, 51, of 734 Fairmont st. nw., who had 5 pints of whisky, police said. Then, at 18th and K sts., they picked up Danial D. Johnson, 55, of 38 R st. nw. similarly laden with whisky.

All were arraigned yesterday on housebreaking charges before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence. They were held for grand jury action, Holmes and Thomas under $2000 bond each, and Johnson under $1500 bond.

Mary C. Barlow To Be Sworn In As Judge Today

Miss Mary C. Barlow will be sworn in today at 4 p. m. as a judge of Municipal Court. The ceremony will occur in Room 212, Civil Division of the court.

Miss Barlow.

The oath will be administered by Judge Thomas D. Quinn. Expected to be present are Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, Senator Matthew M. Neely, and Mrs. India Edwards.

Thomas C. Scalley, who was appointed along with Miss Barlow, is to be sworn in at 4 p. m. Thursday in Municipal Court.

A third vacancy on the bench has not yet been filled.

Davis, Fischbach Confer on Plans For Crime Probe

Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) and Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach yesterday conferred on future work of their special House District crime investigating committee.

Davis would not disclose plans. Fischbach has just returned from a Florida vacation.

Davis said he will seek an early hearing before the House accounts subcommittee to urge approval of $40,000 additional for the crime inquiry.

Accounts Chairman Thomas Stanley (D., Va.), will be out of town for several days, his office said, but may return Thursday.

Carbon Monoxide Suicide Also Had Acid and Revolver

George Cullison, 70, was found dead in the cab of his new truck at 5 a. m. yesterday, in Cobb Island, Md. He owned and operated the general store in this hamlet at the remote tip of Charles County, on the lower Potomac River.

A hose extended from the truck's exhaust to the cab. Beside his body were two bottles of carbolic acid and a loaded revolver.

Death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning, Medical Examiner E. J. Edelen of Charles County reported, issuing a certificate of suicide.

3 Safe Thieves Seized, $2500 Recovered

Arlington police early yesterday claimed speedy solution of theft of a safe containing $2500 from the Fairlington Laundry after three men were arrested while allegedly fleeing from the scene.

The arrests followed a brief chase involving a stolen truck carrying the still-unopened safe, police said. The driver of the truck and two other men were taken in custody less than a mile from the laundry.

Booked at Arlington police headquarters on charges of breaking and entering were William Kirkpatrick, 26, 1415 1st st. nw.; Cleaven Cordell, 32, of the same address, and Charles Williams, 45, 1816 9th st. nw.

Kirkpatrick was captured by Policemen Truman Adams and H. G. Thompson after he abandoned the truck when it collided with a police cruiser on the Shirlington Circle, police said. Williams and Cordell were found a short time later hiding in a parked automobile near the laundry.

There's a bright new future dawning for Patty Carey, the plucky little girl who lingered for 32 days in the shadowland of unconsciousness.

The progress of her recovery has been so remarkable that 8-year-old Patricia Anne, alive today by a medical miracle, may one day soon be able to don a bright and crisp white dress and veil and make her first communion with fellow students at St. Michael's School.

There is a good chance she will completely recover from all effects of the collision with an automobile January 5.

It's too early yet to say for sure, her doctor reported yesterday. But Patricia is doing remarkably well.

She works out four times a day on her exercycle to strengthen her legs and she periodically squeezes a sponge in her right hand to strengthen her arm muscles.

At other times she plays with her boy-doll, Butchie, and her girl-doll, Nancy Lee, gifts of Senator Herbert Lehman (D., N. Y.), and occasionally talks about her own future.

"When I grow up I want to get married and be a mother," muses the daughter of CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey. She adds:

"I think, that is I hope, I'll have two children."

Annulment Attempt Dismissed, Judge Terms Case a 'Mess'

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The tender messages a man writes to his lady love are apt to show up in court, Henard D. Stevens, 28, learned to his sorrow yesterday.

Stevens, a building guard, sued in District Court for an annulment from Mrs. Nellie Grant, 38-year-old beautician. Stevens said that a "ringer" must have been present on November 18, 1948, when Mrs. Grant said they were wed in Baltimore.

Stevens, tall, brown-haired and Tennessee-bred testified that he met the reddish-haired Mrs. Grant in the spring of 1948 while he was a student at American University. They decided, he said, to make it a June wedding, according to Attorney Stuart H. Robeson.

But on the day when they took out the application to wed, Stevens said, she told him of her "past." It included, he said, a "record," and a prior marriage.

Stevens said that this was more than he could bear and he tore up the application. At her insistence, he said, they continued to meet, but there was no more idea of marriage on his part.

On November 18, Stevens testified, he took a test in anthropology, showered, and went to visit Mrs. Grant. And then, he testified, it was that she showed him the marriage certificate from Baltimore. But Stevens insisted that he had been in Washington all the time.

Since Stevens could recall on the witness stand so many of the events of that November 18, he was asked about an envelope on which he had written to Mrs. Grant:

"I love her always . . . I worship her . . . Her is sweet . . . Her is a little angel," it said.

He explained that he wrote the missive only to "pacify" Mrs. Grant. He said that she had been calling him as much as 45 times a night and had sent him numerous postcards and telegrams.

But one of the postcards was postmarked February, 1948, two months before he met Mrs. Grant. Also, it was found that he had a "liaison" with Mrs. Grant in a hotel room.

Judge Matthew F. McGuire said that since Stevens had written the endearing phrases rather than made them "viva voce" they must be considered serious. He dismissed the annulment action.

Mrs. Stevens' lawyer, Charles E. Ford, then suggested that attorneys fees be awarded.

"I'm going to leave the parties just where I found them—in a mess. That includes the lawyers," said the judge.

Bill Offered To Tighten Up Pay Practices

Washington employers would have to pay their help at least twice a month and tighten up on other wage and hour practices under a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.).

The measure is one of several recently requested in a program of the Central Labor Union. It was referred to the Senate District Committee, headed by Neely.

Other provisions would require employers to pay discharged workers in full when they are laid off, and in case of dispute over the amount due, the employer would be forced to submit to the employe a written statement of fact.

It also would require firms to keep records of wages paid and hours worked of all discharged employes for a specified period. It directs the Commissioners to conduct hearings on any violations of the act.

Gerhard van Arkel, Senate District Committee counsel, said the measure is aimed chiefly to assist workers in collecting money owed them by firms going through bankruptcy proceedings. The CLU reports several complaints of abuses in this connection over the years and that nearly every State has a similar law.

Gaming Charges Against Acalotti Are Thrown Out

Flaws in Cases Involving Convicted Gambler and Three Associates Cited

Two bookmaking cases against twice-convicted gambler, Attilio Acalotti, and three associates were dismissed in District Court yesterday.

Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz gave Judge Alexander Holtzoff four reasons for moving for dismissal of the cases.

1. Physical evidence in one case had been suppressed.

2. Physical evidence in another case was lacking.

Serving Sentence Now

3. Acalotti is already serving two concurrent 8 to 24-month sentences, one for operating a numbers lottery, and one for threatening his former girl friend, Bernice Franklin, pretty former waitress who turned state's evidence 14 months ago to become the chief witness in U. S. Attorney General Morris Fay's investigation of Washington gambling.

4. Miss Franklin, the only witness in both cases, has suffered hardships as a Government witness; because of notoriety she has lost 10 jobs in the last year, Hitz said.

Although under subpena since January 26, Miss Franklin was not in District Court, or in Washington yesterday. She also failed to appear in court February 27, when both cases were originally scheduled and then continued.

Hitz admitted he did not know where she is, but said he did not plan to press charges against her for ignoring the subpena.

"Fair and Just"

Judge Holtzoff said the dismissals were "fair and just."

In one of the cases dropped yesterday, Acalotti was charged with setting up a gaming table with Frederick Whiteoak, 1504 Oates st. ne., and Ralph Caparotti, alias Rags Costello, 1124 Oates st. ne. The last two were Washington Times-Herald circulation men at the time of their arrest. In the second case dropped yesterday, Acalotti was charged with setting up a gaming table with Umberto "Chi-Chi" D'Ambrosio.

All four men were among 36 persons, led by convicted gambler William "Snags" Lewis, arrested and indicted as a result of eight simultaneous gambling raids under Fay's direction, March 25, 1949.

Of the 36, two died before they were brought to trial; 22, including Lewis, still face trial; four, including Lewis and Acalotti, have been convicted; charges against eight have been dropped, and one man has been acquitted.

Hearing on Bill

Wholesalers Back Liquor Price Fixing

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Would a "voluntary" liquor price-fixing law in the District result in higher prices or merely "stabilize" them?

Opinion differed sharply yesterday on this underlying question during a heated hearing before a House District subcommittee on a measure to voluntarily control retail liquor prices here.

Chairman Alan W. Payne of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board assailed the bill as an instrument that could lead to "an unreasonable increased price to consumers."

Predict Stable Prices

Spokesmen for the distillers, wholesalers and some District retailers stood behind the legislation, contending it would rub out "ruinous, cut-throat competition." They testified it would stabilize retail liquor prices and help small neighborhood dealers.

Milton S. Kronheim, a leading wholesaler here, insisted the measure would have a leveling-off effect. "It would raise the prices of the cut-raters and lower prices in standard stores," he said.

But steady questioning by subcommittee members — Representatives Harris (D., Ark.), Teague (D., Tex.), Jones (D., Mo.) and Allen (R., Calif.) indicated they feel the bill affords a means to circumvent the antitrust lows and possible price hikes.

The measure would permit producers or distributors to sign contracts with retailers not to resell their name brands at prices below the resale price set forth in the contract.

Low Sales Called "Lures"

Hilliard Schulberg, executive of the Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association, Inc., said some cut-rate stores in town are "selling national brands below cost to lure customers into their stores" and then pressure them to buy off-brands at "exorbitant" prices to make up losses.

Representative Allen sought to bring out the bill was not "voluntary" since most distillers would ask price-fixing contracts and wholesalers and retailers who refused to enter into such contracts would find themselves with few established brands to sell.

"Predatory Price Cutting"

Other proponents were Joshua A. Gollin, vice president of Schenley Distributors, and Walter F. Terry, vice president of Calvert Distributors. Both said the bill was necessary to stem "predatory price cutting" of leading trade brands.

Joining ABC opposition, was Bourbon Dawes, executive secretary of the Hotel Association of Washington. The association, he said, is "opposed to any legislation which fixes prices, stifles competition and runs counter to the free enterprise system."

Chairman Harris said further hearings will be held, but did not set a date.

Red Cross Official Feted On Retirement

James K. McClintock, secretary of the National Red Cross, was honored yesterday by the group's board of governors on the eve of his retirement.

McClintock

McClintock, who steps down March 31 after 31 years of service, received a gold watch bearing a Red Cross emblem on its back, and a resolution expressing, ". . . deep appreciation for his valued service and the splendid part he has played in the growth and development of the American Red Cross." Presentation was during a luncheon at Hotel Statler.

Entering the organization in February, 1919, his first position was that of assistant secretary. Later he served as assistant to the vice chairman, and recorder of the executive committee and central committee.

McClintock also was financial assistant, vice chairman in charge of finance, acting director of insular and foreign operations, and vice chairman of the Red Cross retirement system. He lives at 1717 20th st. nw.

892 Workers Take Four-Day Course

School Bell to Ring Here Today for Census Takers

Washington's 892 census takers are going to school today to learn:

Don't talk politics with the people you interview.

Avoid argument "or prolonged discussion."

Don't lose your temper "or engage in disputes or threats."

And "do not threaten to invoke 'the law'" even though it's on the census taker's side.

The census takers will get a four-day course of four hours a day and be paid $1 an hour for it. On Thursday they'll ring doorbells for practice, but it will be part of the real count which begins Saturday. Those interviewed Thursday won't be asked again.

Bible for the enumerators will be the "Urban Enumerator's Reference Manual" of 150 pages, put out by the Commerce Department's Census Bureau.

For example, it gives this advice:

"Introduce yourself as soon as the respondent (that's you, Mr. Householder or your wife) appears. Keep your identification card in a convenient place and always show it.

"Say something like this: 'Good morning. I am Mr. ——— ——— from the United States Bureau of the Census. Here is my identification card. You have probably heard we are taking a census. I would appreciate it if you would answer a few questions."

The census takers are told they may ask to come in and sit down but must not "demand" this "courtesy."

The census takers are advised to be quick—advice that's hardly necessary since they'll be paid on a piecework basis—7 cents per name, 7 cents for each card recording an infant, 7 cents per dwelling unit recorded and so on to about $8 a day.

Two big problems are refusal to answer and false answers.

The law says every person must answer under penalty of fine and/or imprisonment.

If the householder says the whole thing's a nuisance or politics and tries to shoo the census taker away, he's supposed to tell how important the information is and how well everyone else has cooperated and that the census is authorized by the Constitution itself.

If all this fails and the door is slammed, the census taker reports to his crew leader who will "take further action." No details given in the manual.

As to answers the census taker thinks are false, he should "probe tactfully for the correct answer by further questioning." If that fails, then the census taker makes a footnote to indicate it and gives what he thinks is the right answer. Who decides which to use when the tabulating gets started is not explained.

For those balky over income questions the census takers are told to present confidential income report forms to be mailed to Census.

Citizens Unit Urges Fare Cost Breakdown

District streetcar and bus riders should pay Capital Transit costs only in the District and not absorb losses on Maryland operations, the Federation of Citizens Associations said yesterday.

The federation asked the Public Utilities Commission to order separation of District and Maryland operations costs when it presents arguments for a fare increase.

The commission will hold hearings at 10 a. m. April 4 on the company's request to boost fares to 15 cents or six tokens for 30 cents and to eliminate the weekly $1.75 pass. Cash fares are now 13 cents and tokens three for 35 cents.

In a petition filed by Vernon V. Baker, chairman of the federation's public utilities committee, the federation sought permission to intervene in the hearings. Baker said the federation is reserving the right to state at a later date its views on the company's request.

Baker said that the net income of $318,000 reported by the company in 1949 took into account losses from the Maryland operation represented by the company to be at the rate of $713,000 a year before a recent increase in Maryland fares.

Oldest Inhabitants

William D. Nixon, a retired school teacher of 2417 Benning rd. ne., was reelected president of the Oldest Inhabitants, Inc., at the group's monthly meeting last night in the Odd Fellows Hall, 9th and T sts. nw.

Other officers renamed were vice presidents, William H. Burrel, William I. Lee, J. Howard Quander and Judge Armond W. Scott. New fifth vice president is John C. Payne.

H. M. Smith was returned as financial secretary; Krank D. McKinney as recording secretary, and John F. N. Wilkinson, treasurer.

Georgetown Citizens

A $25 donation for planting trees in front of the Georgetown branch of the Public Library, Wisconsin ave. and R st. nw., was voted last night by the Georgetown Citizens Association.

The group also favored House and Senate bills which call for the preservation of the old house at 3051 M st., reputedly once the headquarters of George Washington.

Other action included the approval of the 5-day, 40-hour-week for Metropolitan Police. The meeting took place in St. John's Episcopal Church parish hall, 3244 O st. nw.

Of Decoy Money

Janitor Who 'Cleans Up' Held in Theft

William Lee Abney, Jr., 28, was once described by U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence as a fine janitor who "cleaned up everything."

Post Office inspectors suddenly agreed yesterday morning. They charged Abney with cleaning out four decoy letters containing coins and marked bills in an office the janitor served.

Thus Abney yesterday found himself arraigned before the same Commissioner Lawrence who had praised him.

Abney, who gave his address as 1514 New Jersey ave. nw., worked in the Bank of Commerce and Savings, 7th and E sts. nw., where Lawrence once had his office.

The B. N. Brown Insurance Agency, also with offices in the building, complained of disappearance of mail for several months. The Post Office inspectors laid their trap yesterday with the decoy letters.

They told Lawrence they saw Abney take all the mail from a receptacle, go into a men's room with it. When Abney emerged, the postal officials said, he had marked money and four envelopes on him.

Commissioner Lawrence held him under $1,000 bond for grand jury action on charges of taking, opening, and secreting the four letters.

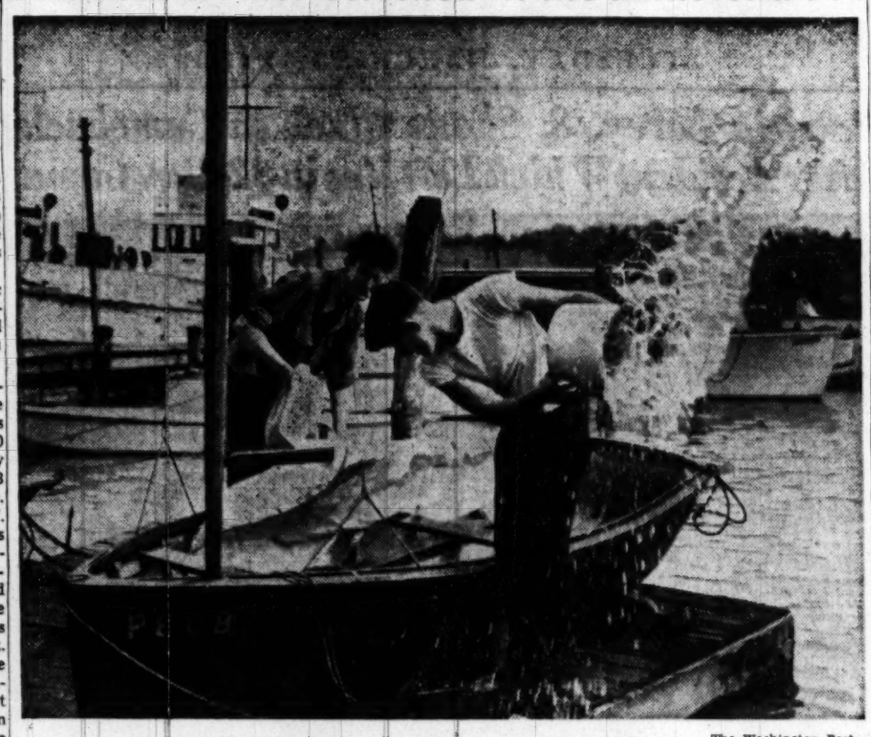
Youthful Boater Rescued in the Anacostia . . .



The Washington Post

UNEXPECTED SWIM—Balmy weather yesterday afternoon brought out the Tom Sawyer in Don Goldbranson, 17, of 2419 39th pl. nw. But a sudden gust of wind upset his rented sailboat and into the drink he went. Eric Nordholm, 24, of 2011 I st. nw., a boatyard employe, saw his plight and came to the rescue in a rowboat. Here, Don, safe on shore again, bails out boat while Eric fixes up the sail a bit. Mishap was about 100 yards off Buzzard Point

While the Middle West, Gulf States and South Atlantic area drew just about all the bad kinds of weather in the book yesterday, Washington shed its collective topcoats in a summery 79 degrees of temperature. But, it won't be quite so mild today, says the Weather Bureau.

The 79 may have felt like a record yesterday. It wasn't. On March 27, 1921, the mercury climbed to 87.

Forecast last night was for showers or even a thunderstorm early today, with rising winds and a low of about 56. Later in the day it will be windy, partly cloudy, high temperature about 65, following by colder at night.

A combination of bad storms stretched virtually the full length of the Mississippi basin yesterday, bringing snow, hail, winds up to 100 miles per hour, heavy dust storms, and tornadic disturbances. A United Press compilation showed 20 deaths blamed on the weather, and hundreds of thousands of dollars of property damage.

One of the fronts associated with the Midwest bad weather will bring the storm, winds, and cooler temperatures expected here, but the Washington area will not feel the full brunt of the disturbances.

James Jopling Dies; Funeral Rites Today

Funeral services for James Edward Jopling, 60, Washington resident for 50 years, will be held at 3 p. m. today at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Takoma Will Elect Mayor, Council Today

Takoma Park citizens will elect a mayor and council today, and decide whether to pay them salaries.

Under a referendum proposal, the mayor would be paid $600 and councilmen $300 annually in lieu of expenses now received. The referendum was approved by the council at a special meeting March 18.

Polls will be open at the firehouse from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Councilman Ross H. Beville is opposed by John F. Sidell, a former council member, for the mayoralty. Incumbent Mayor John C. Post is not running.

Council candidates in two of the city's four voting precincts are unopposed. They are Ray H. Eccleston and incumbent Lawrence A. Oosterhous in the fourth precinct, and Councilman J. H. Nies, sole representative from the ninth and twenty-second precincts.

Three candidates are on the ballot for the two seats in each of remaining precincts. They are Charles H. Klinck, James B. Parkhill and Mrs. Philip W. Woods in the sixth and twenty-first precincts, and Maj. William B. Fischer and Councilman Walter H. McClenon and H. Brooks Perring in the fourth and twentieth precincts.

Referendum Question Protest Disregarded

The outgoing Takoma Park City Council last night disregarded a protest that the referendum question it placed on ballots at the City election today is illegally before the public.

The Council, at a special meeting March 18 with only four members present, voted to hold the referendum on whether Council members shall receive $300 a year and the Mayor, $600 a year. They now serve without pay.

Last night, Dr. Vincent Russo, 501 Philadelphia ave., protested the March 18 vote was illegal. Councilman John Nies was elected mayor protem for that meeting. Dr. Russo said that by such action, his vote was forfeited, and thus a quorum of the Council was not present.

Vincent R. Gingerich, city attorney, said the Council's March 18 action was within the limits and powers set out in the city charter and the vote on the referendum today is legal.

5 Nominated For Seat on School Board

Delegates of Montgomery County civic groups last night nominated five candidates whom they will recommend to Gov. William Preston Lane for appointment to the County Board of Education vacancy coming up April 30.

Three candidates received a majority of the 126 votes cast on the first ballot. They were Mrs. Ben B. Taylor, jr., of 6705 Glenbrook rd., Bethesda; Nathan R. Gilbert, of 4611 Davidson dr., Bethesda, and Earl L. Williams of Gaithersburg.

The fourth candidate, Dr. Webster Sewell, of Norbeck, was named on the third ballot, and the fifth, Mrs. John Scharf, of 6928 Hampden la., Bethesda, on the fourth. A total of 12 candidates were placed in nomination, including H. Stanley Stine, the incumbent board member whose term expires April 30.

The names of the chosen candidates are to be forwarded to Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., for consideration in making the appointments.

The convention was sponsored by the County Council of P-TAs, Civic Federation, the County branches of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women, and the Negro Council of P-TAs. Delegates from 67 non-political and nonsectarian groups participated.

New Works Agency Urged By Gen. Grant

Formation by Congress of a Metropolitan Washington Area Works Agency to take over both planning and construction activity in the District and nearby areas was recommended last night by Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d.

The former chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission addressed a meeting of the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, Landover, Md.

The new body, General Grant said, should probably be patterned somewhat on the Port Authority of New York, with authority to do at least some of its own financing and construct self-liquidating projects.

General Grant pointed out that Washington will not hold comfortably more than one million residents and is fast approaching that point. Then, he said, pressure of population will make it overflow faster into adjoining areas in Maryland and Virginia. He estimated that the nearby areas will show a total of one million population in the next 20 years.

The speaker also advocated decentralizing Government agencies into the nearby counties as fast as possible in order to avoid an impossible traffic and parking jam in downtown Washington, and to minimize a possible sneak "political" attack on Washington if war comes.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, he said, has cooperated well with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission since both were set up by Conrgess in 1926. He said the new agency he suggests could cooperate with units of Government. He proposed that it be set up first, make a survey of problems and solutions, and then go back to Congress for declaration of its powers.

Library Attacks Md. Ober Law, Worker's Ousting

Baltimore, March 27 (AP).—The Maryland Library Association today attacked Maryland's Ober law against subversives.

The association's nine-member board adopted a resolution indorsing the action of Miss Elizabeth Haas, Baltimore librarian who refused to sign a loyalty affidavit required by the law and then was fired.

The Library Association said:

"Miss Haas' automatic dismissal should arouse in thoughtful citizens a sense of the inherent unsoundness and an awareness of the harmful implications" of the Ober law.

Bill Authorizes Repatriation of Insane Persons

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) yesterday filed a bill authorizing transfer of "legally adjudicated insane persons" in foreign countries to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Only those whose legal residence cannot be established would be admitted to the institution.

An aide to Representative Judd said the primary purpose of the measure is to aid families of persons who have been outside the United States many years.

Alexandrian's Death Laid to Heart Attack

Death of an Alexandria paperhanger, found semiconcious outside his rooming house Saturday night, was attributed to natural causes yesterday by Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner.

Dr. Sims said results of an autopsy showed James Dudley, 63, 109 S. Patrick st., had died of a heart attack. Police entered the case because Dudley reportedly had told a passerby, who found him outside the house, "somebody hit me—they got all my money." He died a short time later.

Council Maps Study for State Park

The Falls Church Council last night moved toward establishment of a State park in the Falls Church-Alexandria-Fairfax and Arlington County area.

Falls Church attorney C. Arnold Fraleigh was named to head a four-man committee to study the project. Each unit will have one man on the committee which was authorized March 10 by a vote of the Virginia State Legislature.

The council voted to share expenses of the study, not to run over $100.

Fraleigh said he felt the 630-acre Barcroft dam site, sold recently to a Boston syndicate for development of luxury homes, might still be obtainable for the park site.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter concurred, pointing out that the State could condemn the property for the State park.

Van Meter, read figures to show Falls Church would have been overcharged by Fairfax County—if it had not become a city—to the extent of $112,946.41.

The facts came out in the city-county audit for the ten and one-half months period when Fairfax County handled Falls Church's affairs after it became a city—from August 16, 1948 to June 30, 1949.

The figures showed credits to the city of $218,807.05, and total charges to the city of $105,860.68.

In other action, E. S. Reed was voted a monthly salary of $425 and Bernard Field, a monthly salary of $375 as appraisers for Falls Church real estate. Both are members of the State Department of Taxation.

Council also suggested that a three-man group consisting of Col. Clyde L. Eastman, George T. Reeves and George H. Walter act as a board of assessment to work with the two appraisers.

Sen. Johnson Calls Rossellini Addict, Smuggler of Dope

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.) said last night that Italian Film Director Robert Rosellini—Ingrid Bergman's real-life love—was "an infamous Nazi collaborator" who is "inspired by cocaine."

Johnson, who already has scheduled hearings by his Senate Commerce Committee on his proposal to license flims, actresses and directors, included the accusation in a Senate-floor address.

Johnson said the Italian director is a "notorious cocaine adict" who associates habitually with "an international gang of dope smugglers." The alleged ring, he said, smuggles dope to Hollywood "from Communist sources in China."

"During the last war," he said, "Roberto Rossellini was an infamous Nazi collaborator and following the war he was a ruthless blood-sucking, black-market operator of the greediest variety."

Children Steal Show From Adult Models

By Peggy Preston

A GROUP of youngsters, modeling colorful costumes of ancient Italy, stole the spotlight at yesterday's Fashion Party at the Statler.

The young models, children of members of the staff of the Italian Embassy, won the day's biggest round of applause when they paraded on the runway in their picturesque garb. They won it in competition with some long-stemmed American beauties modeling swish United States fashions, a group of honor guests including five of Washington's recently named best dressed women, and the usual program of games, tests and pranks that characterize the Fashion Party each week.

Among those modeling were the twin daughters of the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani, Dora and Letizia. The fair-haired twins are leaving Washington in the near future to continue their schooling in Florence, and yesterday's party was in their honor. Their costumes were those of the peasant women of the country between Rome and Naples, and including full length gaily colored skirts, embroidered linen aprons, bibs, and great white headpieces.

Other girls and boys from the Embassy wore costumes native to specific parts of Italy. A bridal costume of ancient vintage was of bright red satin, the fragile veil hand-knitted of silk.

Commentator for the show, along with hostesses Austine and Helene, was Signora Paresce, wife of the Attache at the Embassy, Gabriele Paresce. Blond and beautiful, Signora Paresce is the daughter of the famed inventor, Marconi.

Best Dressed Pick Bright Hats

SEATED at the "celebrity" table was a representative group of the town's best dressed women — smartly clad for a luncheon party. Dark little dresses or suits, bright little hats were the most popular costumes. Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, was in a slim, black silk frock and her tiny natural straw cloche was trimmed with straw bumble bees. Black, this time in a simple suit, was the choice of Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney wore her wonderful crimson coat by Dior, and her hat of white straw was trimmed with a halo of red roses. Similar roses trailed down one side of the small hat worn by Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg.

Deep navy in a simply tailored sheer wool was worn by Mrs. Morris Cafritz. At its neckline was a brilliant pin of carved emerald, circled with diamonds.

D. C. DAR Favors Spy Probe

By Norma Lanum

THE District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday went on record against world government, "whatever the form," and against any change in our "protective" immigration system.

Also the patriotic ladies called on the House of Representatives Committee on Un-American activities to "intensify, expand and broaden its scope in exposure of all subversive activities" in this country; and they voted in favor of capitalism.

The resolutions, all drafted by Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, State resolutions chairman, were approved during sessions of the forty-ninth annual conference of the D. C. DAR, at the Natural History Building, 10th and Constitution ave. nw.

The three-day convention will close today following consideration of at least 17 more resolutions touching a variety of issues of local, national and international scope.

Among them is a petition to name the new South Capitol Street Bridge the Major L'Enfant Bridge in memory of the architect and planner of the city. Also the delegates will consider a proposal for the repeal of the District's personal property tax on household effects and the lowering of our real estate taxes.

Preceding the resolutions yesterday, two candidates for DAR president general presented their views.

Both women, Mrs. Edwin Stanton Lammers of Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. James B. Patton of Columbus, Ohio, are on the last laps of cross country campaign tours before the election slated for mid-April.

Mrs. Lammers warned that the "most subtle group" which we must guard against is socialism. It is more dangerous than communism, she said.

Her opponent from Ohio voiced strong disapproval of world government.

Guest speaker for yesterday's program was Col. Paul H. Griffith, Assistant Secretary of Defense. Despite recent release of thousands of reserve officers he revealed that today there are more men in combat units than at any time since demobilization after World War II.

Ten high school girls were awarded Good Citizenship Medals during yesterday's sessions.

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, DAR president general, and Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, national chairman of the DAR good citizenship pilgrimage, presented the medals.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Her Dreams Woman Feels Ideally in Love With Platonic Boy Friend She Had Years Ago Before She Married; Is She Disloyal to Mate?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We don't decide what we'll dream tonight, but if dreams are unconscious thoughts, perhaps I am indulging in something unrighteous. I am 27, married 11 years, have four small children and wouldn't change my husband for the world—but I dream quite often of a boy friend I had before I met Tom.

I had a beautiful wholesome friendship with the boy, and looking back, it seems a flawless camaraderie, one of the sweetest memories of my youth, but rosier than reality could be, I think, and that frightens me. I never even thought I was in love with him in that time; whereas when I met Tom I felt sure "this is it."

I am very glad I married Tom and I find no fault with my wedded life. Why, then, these dreams of the old friend, dreams in which it seems we are together again and overjoyed?

Sometimes there's the wondrous goodnight kiss of old, and always the dream-feelings carry over into the next day, as if the fantasy had been real. At times I'd like to see him again as he is now, but in a way I want to keep him eternally young. Is this harmless reverie, or is it being untrue to Tom?

I lost my mother when I was a year old and my father when I was 10. I had five aunts, all good to me, and I lived with first one, then another; but they had children of their own and I was something of a nuisance, I guess. At 16 I married Tom, 10 years my senior; and it was wonderful to have someone really to love me and want to take care of me. But the awful suspicion occurs to me now that I mightn't have married so young if I hadn't been orphaned, and maybe it had something to do with my marrying an older man.

I look to my husband for guidance, want to be as much like him as possible, and feel he knows much more than I do. These attitudes amuse some of my friends who don't feel so about their husbands. You see there's a difference between the deep respect I have for Tom and my schoolgirl feelings about the old beau. And in writing this letter I've begun to wonder if I'm afraid I'll find out I don't love my husband. Is that the trouble? Please straighten me out. I feel terribly muddled, ashamed and guilty.

R. A.

'Dream Man' Is Real Spouse

DEAR R. A.: It seems to me that your dreams depict unconscious preoccupation with frustrated hunger for "true love," as you suppose it ought to be. And I think "true love" means to you a state of absolute emotional unity with the lover, a relationship of continuous closeness of thought and feeling, in which the twain is of "one accord" about everything, and rapturously aware of each other physically.

Reporting on your dreams you say "Sometimes there's the wondrous goodnight kiss of old." But since you never loved the boy who figures in the dreams, and did feel "This is it" when you met your husband-to-be, and inasmuch as a dreamer usually masks his real desires (if they're unsatisfied), I would deduce that you yearn to return to the blissful phase of "first love" with your husband, when your life was radiant with a joyous sense of perfect communion—or absolute "oneness"—with him.

It is characteristic of young love to feel intensely dependent upon the beloved's presence and complete attention for happiness, security and contentment; and I believe you feel anxiously adrift from this first form of relatedness to Tom.

Perhaps you are vaguely aware that he seems more reserved or less dependent upon you as years pass; and you may feel shut out from him because of that, and too uncertain of what goes on, or too resentful unconsciously, to try to keep psychologically en rapport in terms of resourceful, open-hearted new adjustments.

Seek Mature Love

IF SO, you are failing to realize that it's normal for persons to change in marriage, thus necessary for their love to be flexible and adaptive to survive. In marriage, when husband and wife are growing in wisdom, sympathy, inner strength, etc., the hungry attitudes of honeymoon love tend to dissolve gradually, and to be replaced by seasoned kindly awareness of each other's psychological self. This is a more mature, really closer relatedness than the romantic brand, for it inspires them to see life through each other's eyes, yet leaves them feeling comfortably free to function as separate individuals too.

It seems to me that you have real love with Tom, but that you aren't keeping pace with him psychologically, a discrepancy that might be due to the age difference chiefly, but a difference that you may manage to overtake if you see the wisdom of doing so.

At the core of your doldrums and dreams is a neurotic feeling of need to be somebody's darling on an infantile level of total dependency, with no basic self-reliance and no "head" of your own. You want more closeness to Tom than adults can tolerate continuously; and perhaps it all goes back to losing your mother before you felt safely loved by her. In any case, the way out of your unconscious difficulties is to head towards psychological maturity, and as a guide along this road I recommend Dr. N. A. Overstreet's book "The Mature Mind," published by W. W. Norton & Company.

Preston Delano's Niece Betrothed

Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, and Mrs. Delano, announce the engagement of their niece, Ruth Sailor, to William Edward Balch of Indianapolis, Ind., and Providence, R. I.

Miss Sailor makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Delano and was a member of the debutante group three seasons ago. She spent the past winter in Providence.

A graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design last June, Miss Sailor set up her own shop in leathercraft at Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Mass., last summer. Her success in the venture caught the attention of the editors of Mademoiselle magazine, and was featured in the March issue.

Mr. Balch is now Dean of the Rhode Island School of Design.

Tea With Mrs. Truman Will Wind Up Bond Drive Rally

Representatives of 23 national women's organizations will hold a conference today to discuss participation by the approximately 30 million women they represent in the Savings Bonds Independence Drive which starts May 15 and runs through July 4.

The conference will open at 10 a. m. in Room 4426, Main Treasury Building. At 4 p. m. members will be guests of Mrs. Truman at tea in Blair House.

The conclave will represent virtually every important national women's organization. The morning session will be presided over by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, chairman, Women's National Advisory Committee of the Savings Bonds Division.

Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder will welcome the guests. Other speakers on the morning program include: Vernon L. Clark, national director of Savings Bonds; Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, treasurer of the United States; and Leon J. Markham, national sales director of Savings Bonds.

Also, Miss Margaret Hickey, editor, public affairs department, Ladies Home Journal; Mrs. Oscar A. Ahlgren, vice president, General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Sylvia F. Porder, financial editor, New York Post.

Mrs. Lindsey P. Rawley, chairman, Women's Section, District of Columbia Savings Bonds Division, will be hostess at the luncheon in the Treasury dining room.

Mrs. Nancy C. Robinson, director of Women's Activities, Savings Bonds Division, will preside at the afternoon session.

Real-Life Henry Calls His Own

By Marie McNair

"HEN-REE! Henry Aldrich!" If anyone wants to call Ezra Stone, the youthful Henry Aldrich of radio fame, on Friday afternoon, he'll be at his own children's birthday party.

Mr. Stone

Mr. and Mrs. Stone, who live in Bucks County, Pa., and New York, will arrive tonight with their offspring to visit Mrs. Stone's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Hatch at their home on Jefferson pl.

The small fry—Joseph, who'll be six, and Francine, who will soon boast of four summers—have the same birthday, March 29. There will be a family birthday party that day to be given by the Hatches and on Friday there'll be ice cream and cake again at the home of Mrs. J. E. Saugstad, a family friend. Joining in the fun will be Mr. and Mrs. Saugstad's own grandchildren, Robert and Terry Anne, to come from Pittsburgh with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Saugstad.

The man who plays the airway's adolescent is in Washington to take part in the weekend Cherry Blossom Festival. He'll help pick the Queen Friday night at the Shoreham and will broadcast Thursday at the Mayflower. Also expected in town is Henry's pal, Homer—in real life, Jackie Kelk.

Washington theatergoers may remember Sarah Seegar, who began a promising dramatic career with Dave Tuttle and the Civic Theater, later appeared at Olney Theater under Dick Skinner's management. Well, she's Mrs. Stone now and is much too busy with her pair of moppets and a huge herd of Ayrshire cattle to give much thought to the stage.

Haila Stoddard Dinner Honoree

HAILA STODDARD, of the cast "Goodbye, My Fancy," and her husband Harald Bromley, were the guests in whose honor Dr. and Mrs. James Fadeley entertained at dinner last night at their home in Georgetown. Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Burroughs, jr., and Dr. and Mrs. Aubrey Hampton were among the guests.

Among spring visitors in Washington are Mrs. Curtis Burroughs Lyon and Miss Kathleen Lyon who are visiting Capt. William K. Foster, USAF, and Mrs. Foster at Arlington Farms. Captain and Mrs. Foster entertained at dinner last evening at the Gravelly Point Officers Club for their guests. In the group were Mrs. Henry G. Perring of Baltimore; Col. and Mrs. Clifton C. Hutchison of Centreville, Va., and Mrs. H. Brooks Perring of Silver Spring, Md.

Mexican Ambassador Gives Stag Luncheon

THE Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina, was host at a stag luncheon yesterday at the embassy in honor of Antonio Martinez Baez, Minister of Economy of Mexico and head of the Mexican delegation to the Inter-American Economic and Social Council.

Guests also included Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, Dr. Luis Quintanilla, chairman of the council of OAS; Dr. Alberto Ileras, Secretary General of OAS; Julio Heurtematte, chairman of the Economic and Social Council; Dr. Ramon Cereijo, chairman of the special session of the Economic and Social Council; Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller and William McChesney Martin, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Then there were Albert F. Nufer, United States delegate to the council; Thomas C. Mann, Leslie A. Wheeler, Thomas D. O'Keefe, Rafael Tico, Walter C. Sauer, Dr. Antonio Carrillo Flores, Dr. Vicente Sanchez Gavito, Armando C. Amador and Dr. Antonio Bravo.

Princess Margaret Boncompagni, here from New York on a visit to her former home, was guest of honor at a dinner last evening given by her old friends, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard.

The Princess Admiral and Mrs. Howard expect to leave about the middle of April for Jamestown, R. I., where they have a summer home, and Boston. They'll be back about May 1 when Mrs. Howard will be working on plans for the garden party at the Brazilian Embassy May 19 for the benefit of St. John's Orphanage.

Retiring Embassy Counselor Feted

THE retiring Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy, H. G. Wattimena and Mme. Wattimena, were honor guests at a farewell buffet supper given last evening by G. J. Jobsis, member of the Netherlands delegation to the Far Eastern Commission, and Mme. Jobsis, who entertained at their home on Hawthorne st.

Other guests were David Eichler, Deputy Secretary General of the Far Eastern Commission; James F. Davidson, Economic Secretary to the commission, and Mrs. Davidson; the Second Secretary of the Australian Embassy and Mrs. David McNicol; P. Vaidyanathan, Economic Attache of the Indian Embassy; Faustino Lozada of the Philippine delegation to the commission; S. Suwanto, Attache of the Indonesian Embassy and Mr. and Mrs. Allen F. Kamstra.

Easter Party Called Off

MR. AND MRS. MORRIS CAFRITZ have decided to call off plans for an Easter Sunday afternoon party, so society, all dressed up in Easter bonnets, will have no place to go.

For years, Easter day entertainment was furnished by the late Mrs. Edward B. McLean whose luncheons drew a large part of diplomatic and official Washington. Today nobody seems to want to accept the toga or title of Easter hostess.

Virginia Hulbert To Wed H. A. Carl

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Spaulding Hulbert announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Witherspoon, to Herbert A. Carl, son of Mrs. George J. Carl and the late Mr. Carl of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Miss Hulbert attended Duke University and graduated from George Washington University.

The prospective bridegroom received his B.A. degree at Duke and his library degree at Columbia University. The wedding will take place in early summer.

Visits Her New Grandson

Mrs. David Morgan of Toledo, Ohio, is here for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Goldenberg, and to meet her new grandson, Steven Lewis Goldenberg.

Ambassador's Daughter Wed In Switzerland

Mrs. Cynthia Dunn Cochrane, daughter of Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, was married yesterday in Gstaad, Switzerland, to Charles Wheeler Thayer of Philadelphia, wartime director of the Voice of America. Ambassador and Mrs. Mrs. Dunn went from Rome for the ceremony which was held in the 500-year-old chapel of St. Nicholas.

The bride wore a brown silk frock with no hat, just a brown ribbon in her hair. Her 6-year-old daughter, Diana, was her only attendant. Frederick Prince, American broadcaster for the Swiss radio, served as best man.

Mrs. Thayer is the former wife of Alexander Cochrane of Boston. Mr. Thayer is now United States Government diplomatic representative with the West German Federal Government at Bonn. He and his bride left after a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher LaFarge for Mr. Thayer's home at Bad Godesberg.

Maryland Dean to Speak

Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of education at the University of Maryland, will be guest speaker at the March meeting of the Woman's Club of Riverdale, Inc. to be held in the Music Room of the historic Calvert Mansion, 4811 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md., today at 8 p. m. Pearl, Not Necessarily of Great Price, Is Traditional 30th Anniversary Gift; Rum Filling Has Intoxicating Flavor

DEAR ANNE:

I've been unable to find out what gifts are to be given on the thirtieth wedding anniversary. Do you know, and could you give me some suggestions?

Elizabeth Conger,
Arlington, Va.

The thirtieth anniversary is the Pearl Anniversary. Mother-of-pearl articles—ash-trays, for instance—would be appropriate. So, of course, would anything set with pearls. Since this rather limits your choice, you might branch off into white articles—linens, plates, or milk glass, for instance.

DEAR ANNE:

Having seen Dionne Lucas demonstrate Cordon Bleu cooking on the TV, I am very much interested in French and Continental dishes. I have heard there is a Cordon Bleu teacher in Washington and wonder if you can tell me where the school is.

Mary Louise Allen,
2415 20th st. nw.

There's a Cordon Bleu class at the YWCA, where members learn to make such intriguing items as French Onion Soup au Vin and flamed Crepes Suzette. It is taught by Mme. Irene Beran, holder of a diploma, first class, from the Cordon Bleu. A new series of classes starts next Monday. For more information and reservations, call Metropolitan 2100, extension 29.

DEAR ANNE:

I'd like to offer this recipe to S. P. B., who asked for a recipe for rum filling for an angel food cake.

Rum Fondant Filling and Frosting
2 tablespoons good rum
(more if desired)
3 tablespoons heavy cream
3 cups confectioner's sugar

Add rum and cream to sugar. Beat vigorously to spreading consistency, adding rum or cream if necessary. Spread between layers or pieces of cake and on top and sides.

Mrs. W. J. Lawrence,
Abell, Md.

DEAR ANNE:

In answer to S. P. B.'s inquiry for a good rum filling, this Ann's Kitchen specialty is as good in an angel cake as it is in fragile pie crust with whipped cream topping.

RUM FILLING

1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons heavy dark rum
2 eggs
Few grates nutmeg
2 cups milk
2/3 cup sugar
pinch salt
1/3 cup light rum

Soak gelatin in dark rum. Beat egg yolks to froth. Add sugar and salt. Heat milk, pour slowly over egg mixture and cook in double boiler to thick cream. Cool slightly. Add gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Cool to room temperature, then add rum, nutmeg, and beaten whites.

Federation Chooses D. C. Delegation

The D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday chose its delegates to the national convention slated for May 28-June 3 in Boston, Mass.

They are Mrs. Edward C. Madgeburger, president of the D. C. Federation; Mrs. Gertrude Parks, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel.

Their alternates are Mrs. Frank J. Mulkern, Mrs. Marie C. Deal, Mrs. Harry L. Meader and Mrs. Benjamin Schoenfeld.

During yesterday's executive session at the Hamilton Hotel, the federation also voted to send Washington's Commissioners a letter of recommendation for their proposed referendum on daylight savings time.

The federation went on record last year as opposing daylight savings time in summer months for the District, unless the time shift be adopted on a nationwide scale.

Admiral Raps U. S. 'Mistakes' In China Aid

Vice Admiral Oscar Badger, former commander of United States Naval Forces in the Western Pacific, yesterday pointed up what he considers mistakes in this country's assistance programs to Nationalist China.

In his address before the Women's National Democratic Club, the admiral stated that much of the material sent to the Far East was wasted since the Chinese lacked technical knowledge to use them.

He also asserted that the Nationalist government was not corrupt. Only Communist-inspired rumors molded the public opinion that it was, he said.

The admiral has been named new Eastern Sea Frontier commander.

Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Agriculture Secretary, introduced the speaker, and club president, Mrs. Julien Friant, presided.

'China and the Far East' His Topic

Nelson Trusler Johnson, secretary general, Far Eastern Commission, will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the International Relations Section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase today at 2 p. m. His subject will be "China and the Far East."

Hilton Hotels Gross Lower As Net Rises

By S. Oliver Goodman

Hilton Hotels Corp., which operates the Mayower here and 12 other hotels, last night reported net income of $3,982,680 or $2.50 a share for 1949.

Hilton

This compared with $3,906,205 or $2.28 a share in the previous year. There were 1,498,852 common shares outstanding last December 31, against 1,583,545 at the end of 1948.

During 1949, the corporation acquired an additional common shares of Mayflower Hotel Corp. and on December 31 owned 271,826 shares or 67.75 percent of the total stock outstanding.

Commenting on Hilton's operations, President Conrad N. Hilton noted that last year's earnings rose, although hotel occupancy rates "declined somewhat." He attributed the higher profits to "applying industrial methods to hotel operations."

Gross receipts from operations were $42,026,877 in 1949, as compared with $43,171,720 in 1948.

PEPCO NET OFF: Net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. totaled $417,606 in February, a drop of 15.68 percent compared with the same 1949 month. Operating revenues for the month were up 3.45 percent while total operating costs increased 3.7 percent. For the first two months, Pepco's net amounted to $866,436, off 6.38 percent.

Roth Indicted By Jury for Extortion Try

Joseph R. Roth, 40-year-old stationery clerk, yesterday was indicted by the District grand jury on a charge of attempting to extort $225,000 from two aircraft men.

An aircraft parts inspector for the Government during the war, Roth was arrested in Washington by the FBI last November. He was accused of demanding by mail $200,000 from Sherman Fairchild of New York City, chairman of the board of Fairchild Engine & Aircraft Corp., and $25,000 from A. J. Eckhardt of Baldwin, Long Island, an attorney for the corporation.

At the time of his arrest, Roth's wife, Rita, announced the letters had been a "desperate" device to bring public attention to an alleged wartime collusion between aircraft manufacturers and Air Force officials.

62 Indictments

Roth was one of 62 persons named in 54 indictments handed down by the grand jury. Among them were:

Burnie H. King, 25, of 2213 9th st. nw.; Ernest Price, jr., 24, of 2800 13th st. nw.; Clarence R. Holmes, no age or address given; Leroy Bundy, 28, of 2238 8th st. nw., and James E. Craig, jr., 31, no fixed address, all indicted on charges of robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery. In addition, Price, Bundy and Craig were indicted on charges of carrying a deadly weapon.

The five are charged with the armed hold-up on February 25 of Mrs. Blanche Boldware at her home at 125 R st. ne. The widow of William Howard Taft (Sunshine) Boldware, a former numbers operator, she was robbed of jewelry valued at $6900.

David Rogers, jr., 27, of 7 New York ave. nw., was indicted on a charge of second degree murder in the fatal stabbing of Charles Linton, 27, of 1637 Vermont ave. nw., during a party March 11 at a house in the 600 block of T st. nw.

For Manslaughter

Henry J. Galloway, also known as James Green, 32, of 647 Pickford pl. ne., was indicted on a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of William A. Wright, 44, of 726 Brewers ct. ne. Wright was allegedly struck down by Galloway during an argument in Brewers ct. February 25.

Spencer McGruder, 24, of 1433 W st. nw., was indicted on a robbery charge which included five counts of pocketbook snatching between January 21 and February 7. Value of loot totaled $111, according to police.

Alfred Jones, 37, of 1010 3d st. ne., was indicted on two counts of setting up a gaming table. Indicted on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips were Rosemary Whitlow, 25, and Bross Whitlow, 40, both of 1416 9th st. nw. (rear), and Mildred West, 30, and William A. O'Neal, 69, both of 1602 3d st. nw.

Harold L. Joyce, 22, was indicted on a charge of unlawfully wearing the uniform of an Air Forces colonel while in Washington last December. He was arrested in Chicago by the FBI March 4.

Dirty Picture Sales Cost Man 10 Days

Commenting that persons selling dirty pictures to children should be jailed, Judge George D. Neilson yesterday sentenced Roy H. Bell, 32, to serve 10 days in jail and pay a $200 fine.

Bell had pleaded guilty to possession of indecent pictures with intent to exhibit them. Police said they had complaints that Bell, a luncheonette operator, had sold lascivious pictures and pornographic books to school children.

Bell operated a lunch stand at 4424 Georgia ave. nw., within a block of Masfarland Junior High School and Roosevelt High School.

In sentencing Bell, Judge Neilson of Municipal Court said:

"The corruption of the morals of our youth is a particularly bad offense. This man had these items for sale, sold them to juveniles. It was a flagrant, willful violation of the law. We must take notice of the ever-rising number of sex offenses in this city. Selling things like this to high school children is very bad and may have most unfortunate results on the lives of these children. I can have no sympathy for this man.

"We can't stop or deter people from selling such things as this merely with fines which they can pay and forget about. I'll have to add jail sentences to fines so they will have time to think of the magnitude of the offense which they perpetrated."

Students to Receive Vocational Guidance

The second annual "career night" at Prince Georges County high schools will be held at 8 p. m. today, Bladensburg High School.

Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, president of the State Teachers College, Towson, Md., will discuss vocational trends. The students then will divide into discussion groups. Outstanding leaders in 31 occupational fields will be present to discuss their specialties.

The program is sponsored by the College Park Rotary Club.

Statehood Hearings Set by Senate Unit

Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) yesterday announced that his Senate Interior Committee will begin hearings on Alaskan Statehood April 24 and on Hawaiian Statehood May 1.

Bills to admit both territories to the union as States were recently passed by the House.

Stamp to Honor Rail Engineers

Hospital Sued

$9000 Award For Death of Wife Upheld

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a $9000 negligence award to the husband of a woman who died because a technician erred in typing her blood.

The victim was Mrs. Verona Phillips, 34, who died at the National Homeopathic Hospital on November 21, 1946, 4½ hours after receiving a blood transfusion from the veins of her husband, Paul Phillips.

She had entered the hospital two days before her death to be treated for a lobar pneumonia condition.

A woman technician typed her blood as Rh-positive when actually it was Rh-negative. So her husband's Rh-positive blood was deemed acceptable for the transfusion.

Mrs. Phillips suffered a "transfusion reaction" and her temperature rose abruptly from 102 to 107 degrees.

Phillips sued the hospital, charging negligence, and on February 21, 1949, was awarded $9000 damages by a District Court jury.

Appeals Court Judges James M. Proctor, George T. Washington and David L. Bazelon unanimously affirmed this ruling.

They ruled that the lower court had been right in holding that a "master and servant" relationship existed between the hospital and the technician.

"In our opinion," wrote Judge Proctor, "the facts clearly established the responsibility of the hospital for the acts of its technician."

Phillips, who lives at 2861 S. Buchanan st., Arlington, Va., is a psychiatric social worker for the Virginia State Department of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals. He has two children, Verona, 6, and Paul, 4.

Board of Trade Official Resigns For Florida Post

Reginald Martine, jr., for three years assistant manager of the Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee, has resigned, it was announced yesterday. He will become manager of the Daytona Beach (Fla.) Convention and Tourist Bureau.

Martine

During the past two years, Martine has covered Florida on tourist promotional trips for the committee here. Before joining that committee, he spent seven years in sales promotion work with American Airlines.

During World War II, he was a Navy lieutenant, serving in the Pacific theater.

'Non-Virgin' Club Is Formed By Teen-Agers in Texas Town

Borger, Tex., March 27 (U.P.).—This west Texas oil town was shocked into an investigating mood today by reports that its boys and girls had organized a "non virgin" club to promote canebrake sex orgies.

A grand jury convening Tuesday said it would investigate articles in two newspapers that "uncovered" the N-V club, with supposed membership of at least eight girls and 10 boys.

The Borger News Herald and the Amarillo Times said three or four high school girls organized the club and "voted in" new members to attend meetings in bottomlands of the Canadian River. Sacrifice of virginity was the cost of admission.

Couples were paired for lovemaking by numbers drawn from a hat, the newspapers charged. They said one teen-age boy turned down an invitation to join after he was asked to initiate a new girl member. New boy members had to pass inspection by the girls, the published reports said.

District Attorney Bob Galloway and Sheriff Hugh Anderson said they did not believe the reports.

Businessmen called a mass meeting today to discuss the charges, and some were demanding employment of juvenile delinquency officers to work with school officials.

Bayonet Killing Held 'Wanton'

Witnesses yesterday in District Court told how Frederick R. Ramey, 22, wept over the body of his wife after he killed her by driving a bayonet into her heart through a closed door.

Ramey is accused of second-degree murder before Judge James W. Morris of District Court and a jury of five women and seven men. The dead wife was Mrs. Maytriss W. Ramey of 744 6th st. se. She was slain February 8 in the aftermath of a party celebrating her twentieth birthday. She had two children.

The weapon, Assistant United States Attorney Cecil R. Heflin charges, was the 18-inch bayonet from a souvenir Japanese rifle. The prosecutor said that Ramey thrust the weapon into his wife with "wanton" negligence.

Defense Attorney Louis Jonbloet described the killing as "death by misadventure." He said that Ramey was singularly fond of the wife and should be exonerated under all the circumstances.

Police said that when they arrived on the scene Ramey stood over his wife with tears in his eyes and muttered "May, speak to me. Nothing can happen to you. Nothing can happen to you."

Another witness said that Ramey during the course of the evening had quarrelled with the wife over one of the children playing with a beer bottle, but that the couple had patched this up and appeared very friendly.

Today, the statement that Ramey gave police after he was arrested is to be read to the jury. The prosecution may rest shortly after the statement is read.

Ramey is a veteran discharged from the Army just a few days before the slaying.

Junior College Official Hits Federal Aid

Roanoke, Va., March 27 (AP).—Fear of Government control must be discarded with other traditional hobgoblins if American junior colleges are to fact successfully the challenges of rapidly changing society, Francis J. Brown, staff associate of the American Council of Education, declared today at the American Association of Junior Colleges thirtieth annual convention.

It is no longer logical for an individual to say "I am opposed to Federal aid to education," he remarked. "One can say, 'I am opposed to this type of Federal Education'."

Greater emphasis on experimentation and changes, increased cooperation with other institutions to meet regional, national and financial needs were also recommended by Brown.

Earlier, Dr. Douglas, famed Richmond, historian, editor and author, told the more than 450 delegates that "you are not living in the twilight; you are marching in the dawn."

He denied vigorously that "ours is a decadent society." And he charged the junior colleges must provide libraries are laboratories, and teach their students to write, to speak and to appreciate cultural companionships.

The delegates also heard Gov. John S. Battle and Association President Curtis Bishop of Averett College in Danville.

Dr. Bishop, in his annual report, said "it seems obvious that the junior college movement is destined to become the focal point in the Nation's education program, at least for the next decade or two."

Governor Battle told the delegates that Virginia is delighted to have them in a welcoming address.

Fire Reported On Ship Laden With Dynamite

Balboa, Canal Zone, March 27 (U.P.).—The American freighter Santa Rita reported today that a fire had broken out in her lower hold, dangerously close to a cargo of more than 400,000 pounds of high explosives.

(In New York, Grace Lines announced the fire had been brought under control, but that the ship would return to Balboa for a thorough inspection.)

The 1297-ton Grace Lines freighter passed through the Panama Canal yesterday on the way to Peru and Chile. The ship headed back toward Balboa after discovering the fire, and a United States Navy fireboat raced to meet her.

Fifty-two crewmen were aboard the threatened vessel, but the ship carried no passengers. Stowed in the Santa Rita's holds were 4250 cases of dynamite and 3450 cases of flitramon.

A radio message from the Santa Rita at 10 a. m., when the ship was 200 miles from Balboa, said the fire was "smoldering and smoking" in the lower hold.

Circus Elephant To Be Executed For Killing Boy

Sarasota, Fla., March 27 (U.P.).—Dolly, the circus elephant which crushed a small boy to death yesterday, will be executed "in a day or so," it was disclosed today.

John Ringling North, president of Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus, said Dolly would be poisoned in a deep pit prepared for her burial.

Dolly killed Edward Schooley in the animal tent yesterday while the boy was feeding her peanuts. She wrapped her trunk around the boy's waist, pulled him beneath her huge form and crushed out his life with her foot.

How To Hold
FALSE TEETH
More Firmly in Place

Do your false teeth annoy and embarrass by slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds false teeth more firmly and more comfortably. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH today at any drug store.

ASTHMA MUCUS Loosened WHILE YOU SLEEP

Don't let coughing, sneezing, choking, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and energy another day or night without trying MENDACO. This great medicine is not a smoke, injection or spray, but works through the blood, thus reaching the lungs and bronchial tubes. Usually the first dose starts helping nature immediately 3 ways: 1. Helps loosen and remove thick strangling mucus. 2. Thus promotes freer breathing and sounder, more refreshing sleep. 3. Helps alleviate coughing, wheezing, sneezing. Quick satisfaction or money back guaranteed. Get Mendaco from druggist.

ALCOHOLISM is a disease

Institutional treatment for only several days is required to eliminate craving and desire, and also to create an aversion to, alcohol in all its forms.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Much of United States Covered by Cardinal on 1936 Visit

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

Chapter X

ONE of Cardinal Pacelli's most spectacular journeys was that to South America in the autumn of 1934. Officially delegated as Papal Legate to the Eucharistic Congress at Buenos Aires, he was feted by the Argentines with all the splendor due to the historic innovation of a Papal Secretary of State's first official mission abroad. The President of the Republic and the whole government bade him welcome. In a Spanish of pure Castilian accent he spoke to an audience of 1,500,000 people gathered at the closing demonstration in Palermo Park, on "Peace Between Men." Even greater, if possible, was his welcome at Rio de Janeiro, where he addressed the Brazilian Deputies assembled in Parliament and the Supreme Court in session, in faultless Portuguese.

Two years later he used his annual holiday to pay a visit to the United States. With the revenue cutter in New York Harbor, batteries of film and press cameras boarded the Italian liner "Conti di Savoia." One of the enterprising Yankee photographers, perched on a lifeboat for greater advantage, shouted excitedly: "Hey, Mr. Pope, look this way!" In a statement to the press, he told of his happiness to be in the United States, "the territory of a great people who know how to unite so beautifully and nobly a sense of discipline with the exercise of a just, legitimate, and well-ordered liberty."

Pacelli enjoyed America like an American; he drove along the 3-mile-long Triborough Bridge, halting the car three times to get out and inspect the structure; he was whisked up to the 102d floor of the Empire State Building by former Governor Al Smith; he was officially received by Mayor La Guardia at City Hall.

When it became known that he had made several visits (special correspondents had been assigned to him and followed him wherever he went) to the new headquarters of the Knights of Columbus at New Haven, Conn., proceeding from there to New England and addressing 700 priests at Boston, Mass., telegrams and letters from all over the American continent began to pour in upon him with pressing invitations.

Spoke at Catholic U.

HE FULFILLED first his original plans to visit Philadelphia and Washington. In his speech to Catholic University—spoken with a correctness of English unfamiliar to American audiences—upon accepting the degree of doctor honoris causa, he revealed that, early in this century, he had been invited by that university to become its professor of Roman law, but that the Pope had desired him to remain in Rome. His oration was devoted to "Religion and Science," the harmony existing between faith and science, between the supernatural and the natural.

He visited the Capitol and was the guest of honor at a luncheon of the National Press Club. Here he made an impassioned plea to his 400 journalist hosts to pool the whole of their enormous influence for peace. From the Press Club he was whirled at high speed, with siren-screaming motorcycle outriders and accompanying police squad cars, to Mount Vernon. He did more than lay a wreath on the grave of George Washington, he stood a moment in silent prayer beside the hallowed resting place of the first President of the United States.

The enormous success of his trip made the Cardinal decide to cover as much of the territory of the States as his limited timetable would allow. He chartered a Boeing passenger plane from American Airlines and set out to meet the rest of the United States, which with some 22 millions of well-organized Catholics is one of the bulwarks of the Church today. Thus he went to Cleveland; from there to Notre Dame University; he was kept flying for half an hour because of bad weather above Chicago airport before he could land. ("No apologies"—thus the Cardinal waved the explanation of the airport officials away. "Thank you for giving me a chance to catch up with my reading!")

From Chicago to St. Paul; then over the great mountain divide to San Francisco, which gave him a tumultous welcome, and where the civic authorities asked him to bless the gigantic Oakland Bridge, the latest world wonder. From Los Angeles over the Boulder Dam to Kansas City, with numerous stops; then Cincinnati, and, with a detour over Niagara Falls, back to New York.

Lunched at Hyde Park

NIGHT travel, public receptions, appearances, speeches, inaugurations, banquets, laying of cornerstones, receiving of degrees, conferences with the ecclesiastical dignitaries—nothing tired him out. He had a special table installed in front of his leather armchair in the airplane so that he could type his letters and prepare his speeches on his portable. On one of the last days of his stay he lunched with President Roosevelt at the latter's home in Hyde Park. When pressed for a comment, he escaped smilingly, "I enjoyed lunching with a typical American family." But the pressman who described a scene at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York when the slender, austere figure of this great dignitary knelt before the High Altar, touched the real chord: he had never seen anyone "pray like that."

Back in Rome, he found a dedicated portrait of the Pope as a homecoming gift. In four weeks he had travelled 30,000 miles. One may well accept the authenticity of Pacelli's remark when, immediately after his election to the Papacy, already dressed in his white silk cassock, he went to the Vatican sick room where Cardinal Marchetti, his friend from college days, lay ill. He sat down on the chair next to his bed; then, his gaze travelling out of the window to the distant Alban Mountains, faintly flushed by the last rays of the day, he suddenly said: "Now I shall not be able to travel any more . . ."

No one destined to become Pope has ever been so much in the public eye. To literally millions, in both hemispheres, he is a man they have come face to face with.

Wednesday, Chapter XI—Supreme Pontiff

Harris & Ewing

Russia, U. S. Rebuked by Minister Here

A Protestant minister yesterday rebuked both the United States and Russia for their "illusions of self-righteousness."

He was the Rev. Dr. Harold Bosley, former dean of the divinity school at Duke University.

These illusions, he said, enable Russia and the United States to "read sharp moral lectures on how to deal with their neighbors" to each other.

Of the seven steps suggested by Secretary of State Acheson for the achievement of world peace, Russia has to do them all, he said.

"I can't believe that it is the business of the leadership of the Christian church to take that kind of watered-down soup seriously. Our business is to keep before us that we too have sinned," Dr. Bosley declared.

He termed it "political eyewash and nonsense" that Russia is entirely to blame for the veto power in the United Nations.

"Russia agreed with the United States in fashioning a beautiful ball bat and she's been bashing us on the head with it ever since," he said.

Throughout the last 200 years, Dr. Bosley said, the "fatal illusion of illimitable power" has led nations to attempt to control the world in their own pattern.

"To keep on going the way we are," he said, "would inevitably touch off the final collision" which would mean the end of civilization.

Dr. Bosley also scored those who want the schools to turn out "yes men." They want to be sure that they produce "safe people" he asserted, so they "draw up at the start what it means to be safe and say sign here."

"This is not only a violation of freedom, but it is one way of guaranteeing that the schools will be useless at the point where they might be useful," he said.

Only Echoes

I linger in the memories . . . That light an older day . . . Before I listened to the voice . . . That drew my heart away . . . No, not the voice of someone else . . . But of the places far . . . That filled me with the vision of . . . A brighter morning star . . . And so I left you while the sun . . . Was playing on the grass . . . And stepped into the world I saw . . . Inside a looking-glass . . . Where now I try to wander back . . . Across the years of space . . . To hear your voice and see again . . . The picture of your face . . . But all the streets are empty and . . . The hills are bleak and bare . . . And there are only echoes now . . . In answer to my prayer.

HELLO, SON, WHAT HAVE YOU BEEN DOING TODAY?
I WAS PLAYING AT TOMMY'S, AND WE WATCHED THE MAN PUT IN THEIR TELEPHONE. WHAT'S A PARTY LINE, DADDY?
THAT'S A TELEPHONE LINE THAT MORE THAN ONE FAMILY CAN USE, SON
WHY DO THEY HAVE THEM?
WELL, FOR ONE THING, THEY MEAN A NUMBER OF FAMILIES CAN GET TELEPHONE SERVICE, INSTEAD OF JUST ONE. IF IT WEREN'T FOR PARTY LINES, TOMMY'S FOLKS PROBABLY WOULDN'T HAVE A TELEPHONE YET
DO WE HAVE A PARTY LINE?
WE SHARE A PARTY LINE, SON, AND THAT SHARING PART IS IMPORTANT. IT HELPS US AS WELL AS OTHERS ON THE LINE TO BETTER TELEPHONE SERVICE
P.S. PARTY LINES MEAN MORE SERVICE FOR MORE PEOPLE, SOONER, WON'T YOU USE YOURS "SHARINGLY"?

Do Jokes, Like Whisky, Improve With Age?

Mrs. Blanche S. Callaway of 2356 40th st. nw. tells me that there's one more version of that whisky-vs.-water joke.

In this one, the teacher tells her class about the man who had drunk too freely of whisky and, while crossing a bridge, fell into the water never to rise again. "The moral," said the teacher, "is obvious. Whisky caused that man's death."

"But teacher," protested one of the students, "the man was still alive when he fell. Wasn't it the water that killed him?"

A sound question, that. Perhaps if the poor fellow had fallen into a river of club soda, he'd still be alive today.

BACKWARD BOY

When I type up the copy for this column, I make three carbons—one for the city editor, one for Cartoonist Coakley, and one for my own use.

Most of the time, I manage to get the carbon paper into the typewriter right side up. But every so often I slip, and get it in backwards.

The city editor never complains—possibly because he's accustomed to the technique employed in reading type upsidedown and backwards.

But Cartoonist Coakley gets pretty bitter about these lapses of mine, and when I slipped up the other day, I found this note pinned to his finished cartoon:

"Dear Bill: Reading this stuff and finding a cartoon idea in it is not a pleasant task, under the best of conditions. But when I have to hold it up to a mirror to read it, that's the last straw.

"Hereafter, please don't send me any more carbons. Come up to the art department and tell me your stories in person."

I'd rather not, Coak. Every time I tell a story in the art department, your colleagues—instead of laughing—invariably say, "Aw, that's an old one; did you ever hear the one about . . . etc., etc."

The nice thing about readers is that they can't talk back.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It takes two to make a marriage—a girl and an anxious mother.

IT'S DONE WITH LENSES

Here's a sequel to my recent item about the remarkable resemblance between Senator Aiken and Post Reporter John Ball.

Chewing the fat about it in the office the other night, one of the boys said:

"Put a pair of rimless glasses on Charlie Ross, and he'll be a dead ringer for Vannevar Bush, the scientist."

That rang a little bell in my memory. Someplace along the line I had seen the President's press secretary in a pair of cheaters, and I sent to our library for the picture file, to try to find out when and where.

Dr. Bush Ross

The result is the picture at the right, above. The Associated Press took it in San Francisco on April 25, 1945. Ross was covering the U. N. Organization Conference for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch when the White House announced that he would be President Truman's new press secretary.

Asked about the specs, Ross' colleagues at the Executive Mansion say they've never seen him wear glasses. The closest to a clue I uncovered was one old-timer's recollection:

"He said something once about being fitted for glasses, but I didn't know he had ever actually tried them on. Are you sure that's him? Lemme see that picture again."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Chelf Urges Crackdown on Sex Criminals

A Federal crackdown on perpetrators of sex crimes against children, in the pattern of the "Lindbergh law" on kidnaping, was urged upon Congress yesterday by Representative Chelf (D., Ky.).

The Kentucky member asked a House Judiciary Subcommittee to approve his bill that would permit the Federal Government to step in when a person accused of indecent molestation of children flees across State lines.

Persons convicted, if Chelf's bill becomes law, could be imprisoned 10 to 20 years for the first offense and for life for any subsequent offense. If death should result to a child, the death penalty would apply.

Chelf proposed also that Congress authorize the construction of one or more Federal mental hospitals for treatment of sex perverts and degenerates who are mentally ill.

He said he would like to see sex crimes against children made a Federal offense regardless of whether the perpetrator crossed a State line, but said that counsel for the Judiciary Committee has advised this would be an unconstitutional invasion of the internal police authority reserved to the States.

Chelf pointed out that kidnaping has become "virtually extinct" since the Lindbergh law was enacted. This law permits the FBI and other Federal agencies to step in when a kidnaper flees across a State line.

Closed-Door Cotton Vote Cited

By Drew Pearson

Sometimes the most important votes are cast in closed-door session. This was true the other day when Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma finally voted with Southern Senators for the new cotton acreage bill. Here are the inside facts behind his vote.

Sen. Thomas

Speculating on the commodity market has cost Senator Thomas so many farm votes that he is now trying to maneuver what amounts to a private subsidy for Oklahoma farmers to win back their support.

Thomas' plan is to grant extra cotton acreage to farmers whose winter wheat was destroyed by green bugs. It so happens that Oklahoma farmers lost about 100,000 acres in winter wheat because of green bugs, but the law, on the face of it, would help farmers in other States also.

There is one factor that Senator Thomas didn't mention, however—that, although green bugs also infested wheat in the North, Oklahoma is the chief wheat-producing State infested by green bugs that grows cotton. Thus, Thomas' plan would help only Oklahoma farmers.

Behind closed doors, the Senator from Oklahoma high-pressured the Senate conferees debating the cotton acreage bill to accept his green-bug plan as the price for his vote. Without him, the vote was split, 3 to 3. Three northerners—Senators Lucas of Illinois, Aiken of Vermont and Young of North Dakota—held out against the cotton acreage bill. Three others—Ellender of Louisiana, Hoey of North Carolina and Thye of Minnesota—voted for it. Meanwhile, Thomas sat on the fence. Finally, the cotton Senators gave him a political bribe by accepting his green-bug provision.

Later, alert Senator Clint Anderson of New Mexico blocked this private aid to Oklahoma farmers through a technical maneuver on the Senate floor. But Thomas is still lobbying for it.

Note—What got Thomas in bad with Oklahoma wheat growers was his efforts last year to influence the commodity market and force the price of wheat down—at the same time his speculating partner, Dyke Cullum, was gambling on the commodity market that wheat would go down.

Senate Discourtesy

A few bored Senators sat on the floor yawning. Afternoon had dragged on to night. Still the debate on the middle income housing bill went on.

With the air of a man completely fed up, Charles Tobey, the statesmanlike New Hampshire Republican, arose and said tartly: "When will we grow up? Senators rise to speak on this important matter, but no one hears them. Words fall on the vacant air. They place things in the record, in the vain hope other Senators may read them. Could there be anything more ridiculous than the procedure policy of the Senate?"

Sadly the Senator from New Hampshire walked off the floor.

Orphan Exchange

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Ladies Auxiliary has a refreshing new idea. Instead of exchanging students with other nations, they are exchanging war orphans.

Six high school seniors from the V. F. W.'s Home for Widows and Orphans at Eaton Rapids, Mich., are making a goodwill tour of Europe called "operation freedom," visiting England, Greece, Belgium, France, Italy and Germany. As orphans of American heroes, they will bring back with them a war orphan from each of these countries for an extended tour of the United States—another illustration of how the people of the U. S. A. are anxious to work at the difficult job of winning the peace.

Reactions to Voice

American diplomats bring home word that the Voice of America is definitely, though slowly, penetrating the Iron Curtain. Part of its news is passed around by word of mouth, since few people have radios. However, here are a few letters sent to the United States in answer to the Voice:

GROUP OF RUSSIANS: "Everyone to whom freedom is dear listens to your broadcast.

"We ask you to broadcast that Andrei Vishinsky deceives the world when he says Soviet listeners are indignant at your broadcasts. Quite the contrary. Make every effort to overcome the jamming. We listen."

ROMANIAN: "At least 90 percent of radio owners have found your frequencies and spread the news to those who cannot listen. Systematic jamming in the times of the Germans and now the danger from the new masters discourage no one."

A GERMAN just returned from four years as a prisoner in Russia: "I built a large transmitter in the camp and operated it. I was often called out of bed at night to tune in Western stations for the Russian officers. Even the highest chiefs of police expressed their joy without reticence when they heard America or London. Despite all jammings, the broadcasts are heard with the greatest enthusiasm."

SOVIET ZONE, GERMANY: "We listen every day. You are the bridge to a free world which seems like a paradisical dream land. Your broadcasts have one disadvantage. They instill many drops of sorrow and sadness into our hearts, because we long so for freedom and a decent life. As a former Communist (1923-1947) and as a person recently cured, I would give all my worldly possessions to change place with an 'uncured' person now living in the 'hated monopolistic-capitalistic America.'"

The letters also show a strong skepticism of Soviet propaganda about the United States. One Iron curtain listener wrote:

"Is it true that a capitalist who has investments in five different States can vote five times in the same election? This was used in school to explain the defeat of the Communists in the elections in the United States.

Señor Borras says:
THIS ENGLISH POT PIE HAS PLENTY OF CRUST!
